Yes, A Queer World
Supply? Demand? Antiquated
If all Worked Hard
The Biggest Brain

How queer is our world.

Fascists, led by Sir Oswald Mosley of the English black-shirts, who think they ought to change the British government, learned from a mob that Fascism does not suit England—yet. The blackshirts were driven home.

Next day, which was yesterday, bands of the Fascists invaded the London Jewish quarter, smashing windows. In the first day's rioting between Fascists and the crowd that does not want Fascism, hundreds were hurt.

England is becoming modernized. One of her race track gambling gangsters, murdered "American fashion" in the course of gangster business, was honored with a funeral that would make Chicago or New York stare.

Mussolini does not believe that old "supply and demand" is necessarily omnipotent. While cutting 41 per cent from the value of Italian money, he forbids any increase in prices, any rent increase for two years. That experiment will be watched with interest. The word "money," most important in the world to many, has less real meaning than any other word in the dictionary, nobody knowing anything about it.

A new law in Paraguay compels every able-bodied man to work, whether he wants to or not. Here men that want jobs can't get them. There men can get jobs, but don't want them.

The general idea is good, but if all able-bodied men had been compelled to work always, the human race would still be far back of the Dark Ages. One of the greatest Greeks said truly that bodily slavery was necessary, because it gave leisure to a few, leisure made thought possible, and thought created progress.

If all men had worked hard, by compulsion, there would have been no deliberate thinking. Slavery would be necessary now for the world's progress, had not machines taken the place of slavery.

Scientists of the Smithsonian Institution announce discovery by Dr. Hrdlicka in the Aleutian Islands, off the coast of Alaska, of a skull that once held the biggest brain on record, excepting that of the Russian novelist Turgenieff, who had a brain cavity of 2030 cubic centimeters. The biggest American brain belonged to Daniel Webster, 2000 cubic centimeters.

But brain size and weight are not everything. Beethoven, with a 1750 cubic centimeter skull, will outlive in importance Webster, the French naturalist Cuvier, and other "big brains."

Adaptation to usefulness is the important thing. It is said that the eye of the eagle is twice as heavy as the eagle's brain. That is well for the eagle; his important thing is good eyesight. Just enough brain to direct the perfect eye is sufficient.

By JOE CASHMAN

Polo Grounds, N. Y., Oct. 6 — The Yankees were acclaimed world champions here this afternoon as they sunk the New York Giants for their fourth and final victory in the all-New York series.

Manager Bill Terry sent Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons to the hill, and Joe McCarthy relied on his goofy Castilian, Lefty Gomez.

Neither starting pitcher went the route. Fitzsimmons retired in favor of Castleman during a fourth inning Yankee uprising while Gomez was relieved by Murphy when the Giants attacked in the seventh.

Jake Powell and Mel Ott provided the features with home runs. Powell's came in the second with one on and Ott connected in the fifth with the sacks empty.

The Giants greeted Gomez with a pair of hits, a sacrifice and aided by Gomez himself went on to take a two-run lead. Moore started matters with a single. Bartell walked and Terry sacrificed. Leiber also sacrificed and then Ott doubled to chase Moore and Bartell home.

With two gone in the second, the Yanks tied the score. Selkirk, who has been troublesome all during the series to the Giants, tripled, and Jake Powell, also a threat, clouted a home run into the left field stands to account for a pair of runs.

Rolfe's single with one gone in the Yanks' half of the third eventually produced the run that put the McCarthymen ahead for DiMaggio also singled to send Red to third, who then romped home when Gehrig flied to Ott.

Four singles in the fourth by the Yanks off the bats of Powell, Lazzeri, Gomez and Rolfe counted for two more runs and Fat Freddie was through for the day as Clyde Castleman took over the hurling duties. The new hurler held the Yanks without any more runs for

OTT HOMERS

Ott picked up a run for the Giants in the fifth when he connected with a Gomez fast ball for a circuit clout to decrease the Yanks' lead to two.

Bartell opened the Giants' seventh with a double and scored on Terry's single. Terry went on to second on DiMaggio's error and then to third when Lieber sacrificed. Ott walked and Gomez left the game, retiring in favor of Murphy. Terry then sent up Leslie for Mancuso but Sam fouled out. Ripple, batting for Whitehead, walked and Koenig, up there for Jackson, took a third strike. The inning ended with the Yanks one run out front.

Singles by Selkirk and Lazzeri after Dickey walked brought the Yankee catcher home with the McCarthymen's sixth tally in the eighth.

The Giants collapsed in the ninth and the Yankees piled up 7 runs.

HACKED GIRL SLAIN, SAY DOCTORS; PINK SLIP IS NEW CLUE

GOV. LANDON CITES DEAL NEWS GAG

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Topeka, Kan., Oct. 6—The Roosevelt administration throws a cloak of rigid secrecy around all Federal relief expenditures because publication of reports would reveal "waste and extravagance" in the spending of the taxpayer's money, Governor Alfred M. Landon charged here today.

The Republican nominee branded as a "subterfuge" the offer of Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, to make relief figures public for "any legitimate purpose."

Landon said Kansas officials were unable to get Federal reports for any purpose whatever, and charged the Federal Government with maintaining a "censorship of the source of news."

IMPOSES CENSORSHIP

Landon commented freely on the Hopkins statement, declining to furnish relief statistics to John G. Sutz, Kansas state relief administrator. He decried Hopkins' insinuation that Kansas was failing to pay its share of the relief cost.

"It's the same old charge, and yet the last figures made public

The Democratic Party's Suicide in Minnesota

THE ominous foundations upon which the Roosevelt Presidential candidacy rest are made clear by what the "New York Times" properly calls THE SUICIDE OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY IN MINNESOTA.

The Democratic candidates for governor and for United States senator in Minnesota have withdrawn in favor of the Farmer-Labor party—with the blessing of Postmaster-General Farley, the Democratic national chairman.

A great political party thus, to all practical purpose, ceases to exist in a great state.

KNOX CHALLENGES ROOSEVELT ON REDS' SUPPORT

CAPACITY AUDIENCE CHEERS THRUSTS AT NEW DEAL

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

A virtual demand that President Roosevelt tell the people why he is receiving Communist support, made by Colonel Frank Knox, Republican candidate for Vice-President, was cheered to the echo at a wildly enthusiastic capacity audience at Symphony Hall.

In another telling thrust at the Democratic standard bearer, the Colonel emphasized that sensible people like the Americans do not start civil revolutions but are "led into them by designing or irresponsible leaders."

Colonel Knox was introduced by former Governor Channing H. Cox, who up to this time had taken no active part in the campaign. Chairman Sinclair Weeks of the Republican State committee presided.

Other speakers—all of whom were recipients of rousing receptions, were John W. Haigis, for governor; Speaker Leverett Saltonstall, for lieutenant-governor; Frederic W. Cook, for secretary of state; William E. Hurley, for state treasurer; Russell Wood, for auditor; Judge Felix Forte, for attorney-general.

Colonel Knox said in part:

Citizens of Boston:

It is not inappropriate that I should come to Boston at this time to talk to her citizens. It is my one opportunity in the midst of a most strenuous campaign to speak in Boston. And I would not miss the opportunity at any price. I was born in Boston. The city means much to me. Many years after I left Boston as a small boy I returned to this city to practice my profession.

I am a candidate for the Vice-Presidency of the United States. I am a loyal lieutenant of the standard-bearer of the Republican party, Govenor Alfred M. Landon. In my capacity as candidate I am giving all my energies and all my strength to promoting the cause of the Republican party's success in November election. I am single-hearted and single-minded in my devotion to that cause. Since I left New England a month ago I have spoken in 15 states. In every one I have found American citizens. In every one I have found the same interest in the issues of this campaign; the same enthusiasm for the principles of sound government. In every state I have felt at home.

But no man can be indifferent to the personal side of his activities. No man can forget the place of his birth. And I face this audience in the old and beloved city of Boston with a peculiar and personal interest and pride.

I set sail on a long journey to the Far West before the first of September. Since I left on that voyage I have covered more than 11,000 miles. And while I was gone, a number of important things happened. One of them was a Literary Digest poll. Since the publication of those figures, Mr. Farley has quit claiming 48 states. In fact he has just about quit claiming any states. He has gone very much to work to see if he can still carry some of the states. Another development was the decision of the President of the United States that he had best take the field. Down at Washington the idea that they could win this election by sitting around and letting Mr. Farley and the WPA straw bosses bring in the votes has been rudely shattered.

Charges Distortion

Another event was the election in Maine. That was quite an event. Maine decided that it was time the foolishness stopped, so far as that State is concerned. They began the job of cleaning up that the whole country will complete in November. And then you had a primary here in Massachusetts. That was a big affair, too. Some weeks ago I spoke in Pittsfield.

At that meeting I said that I had no misgivings about the judgment of the people of Massachusetts in this election. I knew that you people have your feet on the ground, that you know the false from the true. Your primaries confirmed that judgment. They indicate that a month from now you are going to do some house-cleaning of your own, including the State House. And then, Mr. Alfred E. Smith had a word to say last week. It has been an interesting month.

In the course of the month I have had some interesting personal experiences. Out in Pennsylvania I made a brief reference to the awful effects of the present administration's policies on the value of the savings of the country, with special reference to the value of savings and life insurance.

Some misguided opposition partisans undertook to distort this reference of mine into an attack on the solvency of the banks and insurance companies. Before they were done they had brought a hornet's nest about their ears, and the attention of the whole country had been drawn to the danger of inflation inevitable in the practices of this administration. I should be more than pleased to discuss this particular issue with you tonight.

But there is no need. Massachusetts people already understand this matter. They know what is sound in finance and what is unsound. They have known for 200 years. I believe that history tells us that the first official government paper money ever issued was issued by the colony of Massachusetts Bay right here in Boston just 240 years ago. To express it simply, it busted the colony. Ever since then the people of Massachusetts have been for sound money. Before the year 1700 the people of Massachusetts knew more about the dangers of inflation than the present administration knows right now. No state of the Union has a better record in banking than Massachusetts. No state has a finer reputation for the soundness of its savings banks. No state has a finer record in life insurance. I do not need to discuss this issue with you.

There are plenty of other issues. Take the Democratic platform of 1932. Read any of the planks in it. Compare what the plank promised with what this administration did, and you have an issue right there. Look at the national debt in 1933, when the administration took office. Look at it now. You have an issue there. Look at the cost of living in 1933. Look at it now. You have another issue. Take the numbers on relief when the present administration took office, at a very low point in depression. Take the numbers on relief now, after private employers have taken on many millions. You have another issue.

Cites Imports

Look at the imports of foreign farm products in 1933. Look at them now. Still another issue. Take the taxes on the people in 1933. Take them now. Another issue. Take the A. A. A. and what it did to the cost of living, the cost of relief, the extent of unemployment, the condition of the Treasury. Take its effect on the textile industry in Massachusetts. There's an issue all by itself. Take that wild bird, the Blue Eagle, and what it did to industry and labor and the cost of living before the Supreme Court wrung its neck. There's another issue.

But what's the use of going over the record of failure and mistake and waste? Nearly all the recovery measures of the present administration died in disgrace, and it's not good form to speak ill of the dead. The whole record was summed up last Thursday night by Governor Al Smith. He said that it was just one long record of dull, dismal, dreary failure. I believe he used another adjective also, but dull, and dismal and dreary are enough.

No Platform

I do not speak of this record in anger, but in sorrow. The present administration took over in March, 1933. A large majority gave them a free hand. The country was in the depths of depression. But it was set for recovery. It was convalescent. It was the last time in the world to experiment. The country needed exactly what the 1932 platform promised. It needed encouragement to business, economy in government expenditures, stimulation of investment, restoration of confidence, co-operation in industry. And immediately upon its taking over, this administration put a sick nation on the operating table and began to operate. It was not just one operation. Mr. Henry Wallace was sawing off the leg of agriculture, Mr. Hugh Johnson was sawing off the arm of industry, Mr. Ickes was operating on the Interior, Mr. Tugwell on another part, Mr. Morgenthau on yet another. You have heard the old jest about the operation that was successful, but the patient died.

And now, after 3½ years of failure and error and waste of the nation's resources, this administration comes forward and asks for your support. Here is an administration whose public works program broke down in public deficits, whose industrial program was rejected indignantly by the people and thrown out by the courts, whose agricultural program was condemned by the people and ended by the courts, whose breach of monetary promises was repudiated by the Supreme Court.

Here is an administration that in violation of the Constitution coerced Congress into passing laws it did not approve. Here is an administration that in violation of the Constitution abused and flouted the Supreme Court. Here is an administration that after the most solemn promises of economy ever given to the American people embarked on a frenzied policy of squandering in an effort to speed the recovery its succession of dumbheaded measures had set back.

And it has the nerve to come forward and ask for your approval. What does it offer? Read the platform of the New Deal party.

What does it say it is going to do? It is a long and laborious attempt to defend its mistakes. It is not a platform at all. It offers no specific program. What does it offer in this campaign? What does the President offer in explaining this platform? He offers a quotation from a mediaeval Italian poet, to the effect that the sins of the warm-blooded are not as bad as those of the cold-blooded. I ask you, what do you think of an administration that explains a thirteen to fourteen billion dollar deficit with a quotation from Dante? There is a second plank in this New Deal defense, equally as good. It is that it is better to have a government making mistakes in a spirit of charity than to have a government congealed in the ice of indifference.

I tell you that the people of the United States cannot afford to have an administration that makes mistakes, no matter what spirit has gone to its head. Government is, after all, a business. When a business man makes mistakes he loses his business. When our government makes mistakes the citizens pay for it. No one will ever know how much one mistake of this administration alone, the AAA, has cost us, in dollars, in factories closed down, in people on relief, in increased cost of living, in larger costs of relief. The point is this, that the people, who didn't make the mistake, must pay for it. It costs the government nothing but a quotation. The American people are entitled to a government that does not make mistakes. When an administration makes not one mistake but a succession of them, when it makes these mistakes over the protest of competent advisers and on the advice of the most incompetent advisers it can find, when it makes these mistakes by jamming them down the throat of Congress, in contravention of the Constitution, that government is ready for the hook.

It needs to be replaced by a government that will look around before it starts making mistakes. There never has been a government of this country that was congealed in the ice of indifference, and we never will have one. But there is always a chance that a foolish government will be sunk in the mire of insolvency. A spirit of charity with other people's money is a very poor kind of spirit.

Having lightly brushed aside, with the aid of a book of quotations, the record of the most expensive, muddled, confused and injurious administration in the history of our great nation, this administration proceeds to present two contentions, the one that it prevented the outbreak of revolution in this country, the other that it brought about recovery. In his Syracuse speech last week the President developed this idea about averting an imaginary revolution. Peculiarly enough, he explained at length that he did not want Communist support, without, however, explaining why the Communists want to see him re-elected. In passing, I might say that we fully agree with the President on this point. We don't want Communist support, either. What's more, we are not getting it.

No Understanding

Here we have an administration elected to office on solemn promises of economy, on exaggerated, inflammatory, and hysterical charges against the preceding administration, on aborted declarations that government spending in time of depression increased expansion and undermined banks and savings.

And there it is now after spending 25 billions in 3½ years saying that it would have been a crime to balance the budget. Well, it didn't commit the crime. It is innocent.

It is also innocent of economic understanding. It says that it had to balance the budget of the American people. What does that mean. It means exactly nothing. It is not the business of the United States government to balance anybody's budget but its own. If it cannot do that it better step out and let competent people take over.

The people balance their own budgets in depression. That is the way we get out of depression into recovery. A wise government can help it along by wise action, by encouragement to investment, by aid to stricken industries, by assistance to the unemployed. A dumb government can hold back recovery by assaulting business men, by regimenting producting, by competing with private business, by squandering public money, by increasing taxes, by terrorizing investment, by inciting industrial strife; in other words, by a so-called New Deal. The people pull themselves out of depression, and they do it quicker if their government has some sense, including common sense, business sense, and financial sense.

The Republican party offers you a government of simplicity, economy and certainty. We have needed such a government a powerfully long time. You will have such a government under Alfred M. Landon.

A Telling Point by Col. Knox

Thousands Mourn Jesse Straus at Rites in N. Y.

New oYrk, Oct. 6 (AP)—Two thousand mourners, including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Governor Lehman and Ambassador Andre de Laboutave of France, filled Temple Emanuel-El this morning for the impressive funeral service for Jesse Isador Straus, former American ambassador to France, who died at his Park avenue home Sunday.

The body of Mr. Straus, who was 64, lay in state in a bronze casket in the center of the altar, under a large "sukkah," a four-poster booth with a canopy emblematic in the Jewish service of the harvest season.

Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson, rabbi of the Temple, said in his eulogy that "the lessons of his life endure. They are written in the standard of integrity he stamped upon his enterprises.

"They are embodied in his philanthropic endeavors to bring relief, comfort and hope to those less favored than he. They are expressed in the patriotic service rendered his country in the hour o fconfusion and distress, when the world was in special need of statesmen filled with the spirit of counsel and understanding, the spirit of accommodation and unity."

Stoneman $75,000 Verdict Upset

The full bench of Supreme court upset today the verdict of $75,000 returned in favor of Attorney David Stoneman of Boston by a Middlesex Superior court jury against the Fox Film Corporation of Boston.

In upsetting the verdict, the full bench upheld exceptions taken by the defendant corporation at trial of Stoneman's $250,000 suit for "services," heard before Judge John E. Swift and the jury.

Stoneman, in his suit, had alleged that false representations were made to him by agents of the corporation relative to the financial ability of the Fox-Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., and the Fox-Northeastern Playhouses, Inc.

Relying on these representations, he negotated, he said, leaseholds of various New England theaters, but because of the corporation's financial status it was unable to take up the leaseholds.

COMMUNISTIC POPULAR FRONT.

If this is true in Minnesota, IT MUST BE TRUE ELSEWHERE.

THE DRIVING FORCE BEHIND THIS MOVEMENT IS EASILY RECOGNIZABLE.

The Farmer-Labor party, to which the Democratic party in Minnesota has been delivered body and soul, is the vehicle chosen by the Communist rulers of Russia for the furtherance of their INVASION OF AMERICA.

This is the same Farmer-Labor party referred to in the Browder report to Moscow, published last July in the Russian language in the "Communist International" and exposed in America by the Hearst newspapers.

That report said:

> "This year it is necessary TO ATTAIN A UNITED FRONT IN THE FARMER-LABOR PARTY between those who, in conformity with the Socialists and Communists, want to promote their own candidates for the Presidency, and the extensive trade union movements supporting Roosevelt."

Browder further reported that the Minnesota Farmer-Labor party had taken the initiative in this direction last spring by calling a conference at Chicago, IN WHICH THE COMMUNISTS PARTICIPATED.

Browder's report also said that the Farmer-Labor party movement was being carried out in this country to establish a revolutionary "peoples front" IN OBEDIENCE TO ORDERS GIVEN LAST YEAR BY DIMITROFF AND THE COMINTERN IN MOSCOW.

Thus, in Minnesota—and likewise in New York, by its alliance with the American Labor party—the Democratic party is SUPPORTING and ASSISTING the Communist strategy.

* * *

THE "New York Times," with the ink scarcely dry on its declaration in favor of the re-election of President Roosevelt, is honest enough to recognize the meaning of the trend in Minnesota.

The "Times," pointing out Senator LaFollette, of Wisconsin, as one of the prime movers in the Minnesota incident, sees him looking ahead to 1940 when:

> "He hopes, as did Professor Tugwell at one time, that a Farmer-Labor party will come into control of the government, necessarily sweeping the Democrats not only out of power but almost out of existence.
>
> "Thus this step toward their extinction in Minnesota may be ominous of even more ambitious plans soon to be revealed."

The Roosevelt candidacy is the knife put into the hands of BLIND DEMOCRATS by Communist schemers, with SUICIDE as the certain penalty of its wielding.

Democratic leaders and Democratic newspapers in every part of the nation are being aroused to recognition of this truth.

The Omaha World-Herald, Democratic for fifty years, has the following to say:

> "Al Smith has not changed his colors. His party has. The party Mr. Roosevelt has in his firm grasp is not the party that Smith led, or Wilson, or Bryan, or Cleveland—Jeffersonians all of them.
>
> "The policies and purposes of Landon more nearly conform to the fundamental Democratic creed than do those of Roosevelt."

* * *

GENERAL JOHNSON called Mr. Roosevelt's January address to Congress "a deliberate appeal to passion" and "the joy of every advocate of class hatred here and in Russia."

Senator Carter Glass said:

> "The 'New Deal,' taken all in all, is not only a mistake, it is a disgrace to the nation, and the time is not far distant when we shall be ashamed of having wandered so far from the dictates of common sense and common honesty."

Thus, the honest words of honest men warn America of what is happening to the Democratic party.

HEAVY VOTING IN WORCESTER

Worcester, Oct. 6—One of the heaviest votes in the city's history turned out today in the special mayoralty contest and Republicans forecast that Worcester would show how the state is going in the November election.

Representative Axel U. Sternlof, Republican, is battling it out with State Senator John S. Sullivan, Democrat, and William A. Ahern, Socialist. Ahern, however, is expected to get but comparatively few votes.

The special election is to fill the office left vacant by the sudden death of the late Mayor Walter J. Cookson. He dropped dead at the Republican national convention in Cleveland.

The number of voters now registered is an all-time record, 87,410 persons.

McNair, Pittsburgh Mayor, Resigns

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6 (AP)—Mayor William N. McNair submitted his resignation today to the city clerk's office.

A statement which he handed to City Clerk Edward B. Schofield read:

> "I hereby resign from office as Mayor of the City of Pittsburgh, to be effective immediately."

He then walked out of the City Hall.

City officials disagreed as to whether the resignation could become effective at once or await action on it by City Council.

The mayor offered to resign yesterday after city councilmen indicated they would not accept his new appointee for the city treasurer's position, succeeding James P. Irk, dismissed by the mayor.

DOROTHY Arrives in EGYPT

TELLS OF WALK THROUGH CITY

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service, New York Evening Journal and Boston Evening American.)

Alexandria, Egypt, Oct. 6 (INS)—To this storied land of pharaos and fezes, mummies and Moslems, your globe-girdling wanderer flew from Greece today with each new sight of scenic majesty and historic beauty bringing me closer to the goal of this record-breaking jaunt—Gotham-on-the-Subway.

From the air, this famous metropolis, where the relics of Cleopatra and Alexander the Great are said to repose, looks like a modern industrial city.

But a close-up discloses an antiquity that all the progress of this 20th century that has made a 20-day trip around the world not only possible but probable cannot efface.

Garbed in Black

In the streets are women garbed in black with thick veils hiding all but limpid eastern eyes. On the sidewalks are barbers' chairs, with energetic razor-wielders mowing the whiskers of patient clients right out under a hot sun and in full view of passersby.

There are natives in fezes and tourists in pith helmets weaving in motley procession along the crowded main thoroughfare.

There are ancient buildings with sharp edges softened by the rains and winds of time. There are steps concaved into pools by countless footsteps of centuries.

South of us lie the pyramids, Luxor and the City of Memphis that dates back to a day when our Tennessee town of similar name was in all probabilities a primeval wilderness.

From Brindisi, Italy, this trip has been a "thumbing"—and I don't mean a hitch-hike. It's been a thumbing back into the pages of history.

We spent half an hour aboard a yacht in the Cretan harbor of Mirabella while our plane was being refueled. Here was the setting for the legend of King Midas, but the closest I'll ever get to his golden touch will be that nugget Mayor Rossi of San Francisco has offered to the first of us three rivals to touch American shores again.

Over a cup of tea we recalled a couple of earlier fliers, who while they may not have attempted a record flight even around the small world they then knew, at least carved themselves a place in "aviation history."

I refer to Daedalus and Icarus, a couple of romantic figures of mythology who, as legend would have it, flew out of Crete with wings stuck to their shoulders with wax. The same hot sun I encountered today melted the wax, of course, and the boy wound up in the Mediterranean.

Goethe was finishing the second part of "Faust" when past 72; a French author created a new style for France at 86, when he wrote his life of Saint Louis—his first book by the way; Michelangelo and Titian were doing magnificent work at 80 and 90, and Tennyson was nearing 80 when he wrote "Crossing the Bar," one of the finest things he ever wrote.

Wine bottled in Germany hereafter will have, instead of a cork, a plug of German wood.

To help make Germany independent of the outside world, the use of cork that does not grow in Germany is forbidden. This will save 10,000,000 marks a year, spent abroad for cork.

The "man with the hoe" and the original American farmer following the plow on foot would be interested to know that farmers may now have pneumatic rubber-tired farm tractors, equipped with radio.

This writer, who farms in various parts of the United States, for profit, without getting any, can testify that the huge pneumatic tires for tractors wear well, and in the language of his associate, Thomas Macauley, formerly of the Genesee valley, "ride like a baby carriage."

During the campaign the tractor radio will enable the farmer to learn, as he travels up and down the field, what else science and imagination have to offer him. The pneumatic-tired tractor is invaluable for hauling heavy loads on concrete highways.

'Swedish Lindy' Hops Sea Alone

Pilot, Girl He Left

BARONESS EVA VON BLIXEN-FINECKE

New York, Oct. 6 (AP)—Facing hazardous weather in a 200-mile wreath off the Newfoundland coast, Kurt Bjorkvall, 31-year-old Swedish flier, pointed the nose of his red and green monoplane, Pacemaker, eastward today in a projected nonstop flight to Stockholm.

Bjorkvall lifted his plane from the runways of Floyd Bennett Field at 7:55 a. m., Eastern Standard Time, climbed steadily as the ship gathered speed, and 40 minutes later was off the Long Island coast cruising at about 100 miles an hour.

On the ground he left a dejected Baroness Eva von Blixen-Finecke, who had expected until the last minute to accompany him.

Bjorkvall, who purchased the Bellanca monoplane outright a few days ago, rejected pleas of the baroness to make the flight in a dramatic conference in a tiny office near where his plane waited.

"I bought the plane and that's all there is to it," Bjorkvall said. "I wanted to make the flight solo, and I'm sorry I cannot take the baroness. The flight is my own."

Weather bureau officials said his flight up the Maine coast to St. Johns, Newfoundland, would be through excellent weather conditions, with mild crosswinds.

Off Cape Race, however, cold westerly winds, with the temperature at the freezing point in the zone where he probably will fly. Rain also may be encountered, adding to the hazards over a stretch of about 300 miles.

Baroness von Blixen-Finecke, who had arrived at the field at 5 a. m. with a vacuum bottle containing a quart of coffee, was frankly upset.

For two hours at the field, the pilot and the 28-year-old adventuress did not meet at all. Finally they went to a nearby office for a 20-minute conference.

The baroness emerged dejected.

"It looks as if I'm grounded," she said.

"Of course, I am jolly well going to fly the Atlantic sometime. I hope to do it solo with an automatic pilot that will not back out on me at the last minute.

"I can say no hard words, but I am terribly sorry."

JOAN, Dick, Hunt LAMP

NEWLYWEDS LAND IN N. Y.

New York, Oct. 6 (INS)—Looking for a lamp and some wallpaper, and winding up a whirlwind marriage and honeymoon, Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, newest of Hollywood newlyweds arrived here today aboard the liner Santa Paula for a ten-day stay.

The lamp and wallpaper?

They're very important, according to Joan—pardon us, Mrs. Powell.

"We have a new place in Beverly Hills," said she, "that's in the throes of being decorated. I have to pick out some wallpaper and get a lamp for the living room. It has to be an antique, crystal lamp."

"Oh, no. But everyone has to have a lamp," grinned the new Mrs. Powell, wed to her co-star of the Warner Bros. lot in the same steamer suite they occupied on their arrival.

Their plans?

Will See Shows

"We want to see all the shows and some movies," said Powell, becoming the family spokesman. "I don't think we'll get a chance to take in any of the World Series."

After 10 or 12 days here, they'll hop a train for Hollywood, where both are scheduled for new pictures. In the meantime they'll prowl around town and both will fulfill radio engagements.

"That reminds me," said his spouse, "we'll have to go up to 93rd and Central Park West."

Miss Blondell is a native New Yorker and insisted that she had to visit that neighborhood, where she was born.

Wed Too Fast

As the Santa Paula steamed up the bay, the bride busied herself pouring coffee for newsmen and photographers, when she wasn't busy answering questions.

"How did he propose to you?" asked a reporter.

"He didn't," she replied, "we just seemed to take each other by storm. That's why I'm not wearing an engagement ring. We were married so fast Dick didn't have time to buy an engagement ring."

POLICE IN 2D BATTLE WITH LONDON REDS

BULLETIN

London, Oct. 6—(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)—Police, attempting to rout assailants of Jews, charged crowds in Stepney Green today. The crowds gathered after Fascist literature had been piled on the steps of a tenement. A police cordon was thrown around the area.

London, Oct. 6 (US)—Another clash between police and Communists occurred here when 120 "Bobbies" broke up a mob that was being harangued by a radical agitator in Bethnal Green.

Nearby a Fascist orator was addressing another crowd, condemning the serious Communist riots which forced police to ban a Fascist parade and meeting at which Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist chief, was to speak.

Twenty mounted police and 100 afoot, all armed with long nightsticks and truncheons, were on hand to prevent a repetition of the Coommunist attempt to battle the Fascists in the streets.

In Sunday's disorders, 84 Communists were arrested and more than 300 hurt, 15 of the latter seriously enough to require hospitalization.

In Bethnal Green, the Communist orator's efforts to shout down the Fascist speaker drew such crowds that the police were forced to break up the throng to forestall the possibility of further street fighting.

There were none seriously injured, although several Communists who balked at being dispersed received thumped heads.

"The Jews who shouted for the head of Mosley will tomorrow be shouting for the head of the king.

"If the monarchy should be in danger and they use machine guns, our machine guns will be better than theirs. The day of the Jew in England is done."

Five other Fascist meetings called by Sir Oswald in the East End, London's poorer district, passed off without disorder, due probably to the fact that special heavy police detachments were on hand.

Earlier in the day police broke up a gathering of 300 Communists gathered outside Thames court, where the cases of 70 of their fellows, arrested for Sunday's rioting, were being heard.

Many were remanded for further hearing, while in the cases disposed of, fines ranging from 50 cents to 10 were levied.

Concord, N. H., Oct. 6—Rising from a sickbed to appear in court and act as her own attorney, Mrs. Lalla F. Barr, 63, former New York and Washington society matron, today recalled her divorced husband to the stand again, against whom she seeks to recover $100,000 damages and personal property.

Ill over the weekend since last Saturday's court session with a severe cold, Mrs. Barr came into court apparently determined to continue fighting "until she drops."

3000 Violate WPA RULES

CURLEY FORCES DO HIRING

Violations of rules set up by Acting State Administrator Paul Edwards to hasten jobs under the Works Progress Administration in Boston in time for election, widened the breach between Edwards and Governor Curley today.

More than 3000 persons have been given jobs by the Curley forces without the required investigation of their relief status, the Boston Evening American learned.

Officials at the Boston Works Progress Administration offices on Oliver street admitted that the names of persons had been sent out with utter disregard to proper certification. One official declared:

"We'll worry about certifying those men after we get the people on the job."

Only last August Acting Administrator Edwards issued the warning that unless cities and towns complied with the new regulations concerning eligibility they would not be allowed to hire additional men "when the increased allotments are established for Massachusetts.

These new rules called for the setting up of so-called certifying agencies within the city and town thus giving local authorities the power to select the persons for relief jobs.

Many Jobs

So while Edwards announced he was relying on the eligibility rules when it came to hiring additional men, at the same time branding the governor's promise to secure jobs as "futile," Democratic chiefs had only to point to the thousands of jobs given out in Boston over the week-end.

The significance in this, they pointed out, is that the jobs were made available within a week after hundreds had stormed the governor's office at the State House and then were sent to Oliver street to "register."

At Oliver street officials admitted that included in the thousands of jobs were the persons sent down from the state house by the governor.

This new move, giving Governor Curley the upper hand in the matter of handing out jobs on the eve of election, added impetus to the prediction made exclusively in last Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser when it was stated that Governor Curley is "in a commanding position to open the federal moneybags wide in an attempt to halt the Landon surge."

Throughout the state, cities and towns have been repeatedly warned to set up certification boards.

Yet included in the thousands of notices sent out in Boston were hundreds of "unknown" persons and others with "addresses unknown" as a mad scramble was made to provide jobs on projects which were once abandoned.

'EXECUTION SQUADS' OF SPAIN REDS KILL 3000 CITIZENS

COPYRIGHT, 1936, BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Border, Oct. 6—Reliable advices, brought here by refugees from Madrid, today stated the Spanish capital's Extermist "execution squads" had killed well over 3000 middle and upper class citizens.

The executions even have increased, the advices said, since Francisco Largo Caballero became premier on September 4.

Bands of "bloodthirsty young murderers," the refugees said, are responsible for the executions. The travelers described the death squads as the Spanish counterpart of the French "sans-culottes" of 1789, who, with bloodsoaked tumbrils, daily fed "Madame Guillotine" with aristocrats.

While the municipal morgue squad's figure for corpses collected on the outskirts of Madrid reached a record one-day low of 15 early in September, it soared to 82 one day a fortnight later.

POLITICAL FRICTION

One explanation of the increase, the advices said, might be found in new friction over political concessions between the revolutionary Socialist government and the Syndicalist National Confederation of Labor with its satellite, the Federation of Iberian Anarchists.

The role of freelance executioner, the refugees added, is second nature to the avowed gunmen in these two organizations, but the members of the popular front parties and unions regard it with loathing.

The "Cheka," people's tribunal, understood to be entirely dominated by the Anarchists and Syndicalists at its headquarters on Holy Sunday Hill, successfully hoodwinks the police and the government over the treatment of persons known to have fallen into its clutches, today's advices said.

Many persons have been executed, they added, despite official efforts to save their lives and "Cheka" assurances to the authorities that no harm would befall them.

All indications, the sources said, now point to sterner government measures to liquidate the amateur "executioners."

150,000 Rebel Troops Wait Madrid March

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press

Burgos, Spain, Oct. 6—Insurgent commanders, inspired by reports of fresh victories in the bloody civil war against Socialists, marshaled 150,000 disciplined troops today for a march on Madrid.

The decisive assault on the capital, Fascist headquarters announced, would be led by General Francisco Franco, head of the insurgent provisional government and designated "chief of the Spanish army."

The drive was set to begin as soon as present operations to tighten the insurgent lines and effect junctions of marching columns were completed.

Flaming Liquid Sprayed On Oviedo Defenders

Madrid, Oct. 6 (INS)—Spain's civil war broke out again today like a many-fissured volcano into a series of deadly and destructive sectional encounters as the siege of Madrid tightened into a long, grim struggle.

After one of the most devastating bombardments that any city has suffered in this fratricidal war, the loyalist government announced today that the Asturian miners who have besieged Oviedo for eight weeks had at last succeeded in entering the northern city and now hold three separate points within its gates.

Gen. Queipo De Llano, insurrectionist leader, admitted in his daily broadcast from Seville that 1000 shells and 400 bombs rained on Oviedo yesterday alone, after an almost equally terrific attack Sunday.

Flaming liquid was sprayed from the air on the battered city, General De Llano said, and armored cars made thrusting attacks on Oviedo's outskirts.

30 Insurgent Planes Bombard Madrid

POLAND WOULD EXILE JEWS

Geneva, Oct. 6 (AP)—The world Jewish problem took on new complications today with a Polish demand that the League of Nations find a home somewhere else for the Polish Jews.

M. Komarnicki, the Polish delegate, told the League Assembly's political committee that, while Palestine was the natural and principal home for the Jews, other places must be found as an asylum for the "immense reservoir of Jewish population inhabiting central and eastern Europe.

He said Poland was over-populated as the result of Jewish masses "whose economic structure does not harmonize with the social evolution of Poland."

The Jewish population of Poland is 3,500,000.

Fin. Com. Member Sued for $100,000

A mystery suit for $100,000 against Robert Robinson, member of the Boston Finance Commission and former assistant district attorney was filed in Suffolk Superior Court today by former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien.

Robinson was an assistant of the Union pary condidate for Vice-President and U. S. senator during O'Brien's term as Suffolk County prosecutor.

Robinson was appointed to the finance commission by Governor Curley, one of O'Brien's opponents in the Senate contest next month.

Immediately after filing, O'Brien petitioned that Judge Joseph Walsh of the equity session impound the papers in the suit. His request was granted.

Fifteen minutes later, Robinson appeared at the court and received permission to read the declaration. He was told at the time to file an appearance. He was accompanied by a stenographer.

To queries of reporters afterward, Robinson said he couldn't talk about the nature of the action or he would be in contempt of court.

N. Y. Pastor Lauds Browder Air Ban

New York, Oct. 6—Lauding the action of Terre Haute, Ind., authorities in preventing Communist presidential candidate Browder from speaking there last week, the Rev. Father Edward L. Curran of Brooklyn, editor of the magazine "Light," declared last night:

"Would to God we had about five hundred mayors in this country like the one they have in Terre Haute. They treated the sanctimonious Mr. Browder and his pretensions of piety in just the way he deserved to be treated."

'New Alcazar' Besieged for 80 Days

Lisbon, Oct. 6 (INS)—Already besieged for 80 days in a tiny fortress high in the mountains of Morena 20 miles from Andujar, Spain, 230 rebel men, women and children are today holding out in a new "Alcazar."

A rebel relief column is now within 30 miles of the fort and, as at the Alcazar in Toledo, food is being dropped by parachute from airplanes.

AMOSKEAG MILL BOOKS STUDIED

Books of the defunct Amoskeag Manufacturing Company were placed under scrutiny today by the Sabath Congressional Committee, which held public hearings at the Federal building last week on the failure of the company.

It is expected that work of examining the books will take at least three weeks.

The evidence already taken at the public hearings, which were postponed six weeks by Chairman Sabath of the committee, is being prepared for submission to United States attorney-general at Washington for consideration, it was learned.

REINFORCE RED FLEET, COAST DEFENSES

Moscow, Oct. 6 (INS)—Under the startling headline, "The Soviet Union Is Now a Sea Power," Russia today revealed through the official newspaper Pravda that the U. S. S. R. has made long strides towards building a fleet strong enough to compete with Germany and Japan.

Details were kept closely guarded, as all concrete information about the Soviet fleet has been since the revolution, but Pravda let it be known that not only has the union a formidable submarine array; but battleships are being built and the vast Russo-Siberian coast line is being heavily fortified.

The news of the Russian naval coup, a bombshell parallel to the announcement a year ago that the Soviet Union has a standing army of 1,300,000, dealt a hard blow to Britain's hopes to bring Moscow into a naval limitation pact broadening, as in the case of an Anglo-German treaty, the 1936 Anglo-Franco-American treaty.

Russia's action now puts teeth in her demands, voiced in naval discussions in London, that she will submit to no limitations in which Germany and Japan are not parties.

At first Pravda explained, "we concentrated on building a submarine fleet," but now Russian industrialization has "progressed to a point where materials and conditions have been provided for further development"—in other words, the construction of battleships and lighter craft, besides a strong naval air arm.

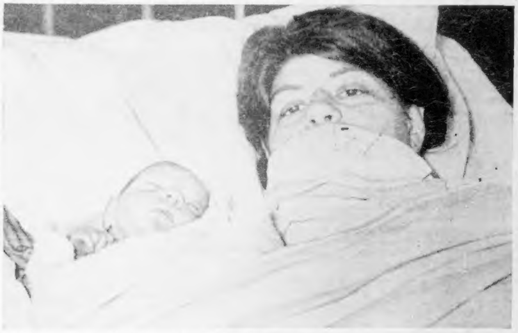
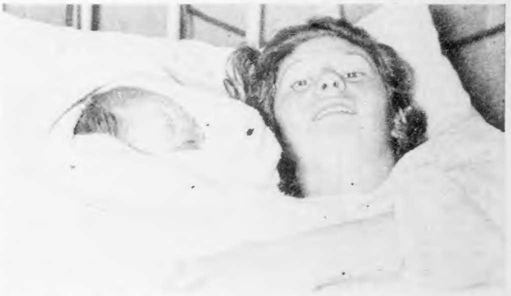
Mother-Daughter Babies Born Minutes Apart



MRS. JULIA KLEIN AND BABY BOY AT BOSTON CITY HOSPITAL



MRS. LILLIAN PECKER AND BABY GIRL AT WHIDDEN MEMORIAL

Would you believe it? Mrs. Julia Klein, 35, of 195A Magnolia street, Roxbury, at the City Hospital gave birth to a five-pound, 15-ounce baby boy, at 7:30 p. m., last night. Five minutes later, her daughter, Mrs. Lillian Pecker, 20, of 33 Elm street, Chelsea, gave birth to a baby girl, at the Whidden Memorial Hospital, weighing six pounds, and one ounce. Mothers and babys are "doing nicely," as may be seen above.

Boy's Uncle 5 Minutes Younger

The question is today whether or not Baby Pecker will have to say "Uncle."

For the fact of the matter is that Baby Klein, mother's brother, arrived at Boston City Hospital just five minutes after the stork had visited Whidden Memorial Hospital in Everett.

In other words, Mrs. Julia Klein, 35, of Magazine street, Roxbury, became a mother for the seventh time and a grandmother for the first time all within that span of five minutes.

Mrs. Klein's daughter, Mrs. Lillian Klein Pecker, of Elm street, Chelsea, is the 20-year-old wife of William Pecker, coal and oil dealer. Her baby, a girl, weighed six pounds and one ounce.

"Uncle" tipped the scales at five pounds and 15 ounces. And everybody was happy, because when the Boston Evening American photographer visited Mrs. Pecker today, she said:

"Tell mother, if you see her, I had hoped hers was going to be a boy."

Mrs. Klein's other children are Max, 19; Emma, 16; Pauline, 13; Shirley, 7, and Carol, 17 months. She is the wife of Harry Klein, a truckman.

Drive to Break Up Smuggling Ring

Washington, Oct. 6 (INS)—Carrying on its drive to smash smuggling from the Orient into the United States through the Hawaiian Islands and West Coast, the Treasury Department today announced a shakeup in the customs administration in Honolulu.

John Olivera, chief inspector at Honolulu, has been demoted to the rank of clerk, the Treasury said, and Commander Stanley V. Parker of the coast guard, an authority on marine law, especially the phases regarding smuggling, is en route to Hawaii to take charge.

Honolulu has become, the Treasury declared, a thriving relay point for merchandise intended for illegal entry into this country. These shipments originate in the Orient, and their most important item is narcotics.

TORCH STORY'S TIPSTER WINS $25 PRIZE

By THE NEWS TIP EDITOR

Turned into human torches when their car turned over and burst into flames, four persons were injured and one killed near Morey bridge, Taunton.

A woman resident near the scene, sensing news value, telephoned the Boston Evening American and a few minutes later the American was on the street with a complete story of the tragic accident.

To her goes first prize of $25 in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser News Tip Contest.

Second prize of $10 was split this week.

A Concord salesman wins the other half for information regarding the finding of a dead man in a parked car.

A Somerville woman is the recipient of the other half of the five dollars for tip on a fire.

The $1 awards were sent to the following: A South Boston man for a tip on a political story; a Somerville laborer who reported an accident; a Braintree housewife who telephoned about an explosion; a Boston man for a tip on a waterfront; a Somerville man who conveyed the news of an accident; a Framingham woman who reported the finding of a body.

A Newtonville man for his tip on an accident; a Malden man who reported a fatal motor crash; a North Andover woman for information regarding a triple auto accident, and a Quincy man who telephoned the report of an auto crash that killed one person.

Balk Labor League Rally on Common

A permit for a mass demonstration on Boston Common today, the forerunner of the first Roosevelt rally in Boston scheduled for tonight at Tremont Temple, was denied the Non-Partisan Labor League today by City Hall officials.

While a police permit has been issued for a parade from Washington street at Broadway to Park Square at Charles street, near the entrance to the Common, a police detail will be on hand to see that it advances no further.

The mass demonstration on the Common was intended to stir up enthusiasm for tonight's rally which many state Democrats were sidestepping.

The chief speaker scheduled is Fiorello H. LaGuardia, the Socialist-Republican mayor of New York; David Dubinsky, the Socialist chosen as a Roosevelt elector in New York, and Sidney Hillman, former Socialist of New York.

in Washington show Kansas ranked sixteenth among the states in contributions," said Landon.

"The administration has gone fishing again and has found a new lot of red herring. It's too bad we can't eat them."

Landon declared Hopkins' offer to make federal figures public for any "legitimate purpose" did not comply with his request to the President for "full publication of all federal relief reports."

"These figures should be given to the public," said Landon. "Not to do so is to impose a censorship on the source of news. Hopkins has pointedly resisted every effort to make these figures public.

DISCUSSES WATERWAY

"The expenditure of public moneys is public business and the records should be made public to the newspapers. I regard newspaper publicity as a legitimate purpose.

"Every citizen has a right to know how his tax money is being spent. The natural inference from his refusal is that they are afraid of the waste and extravagance publication of the figures will reveal."

Saugus Wars Over WPA Job Loss Threat

Charging that John J. Mullen, chairman of the Saugus selectmen and the Saugus Democratic town committee, has threatened WPA workers with the loss of their jobs if they do not support Democrats, C. F. Nelson Pratt, selectman and congressional candidate, pressed today for an investigation.

It is alleged by Pratt that Mullen visited Works Progress Administration projects and warned that if the workers did not join the Roosevelt-Curley Club they would be "out."

The workers were also advised that at a Democratic rally tonight, the roll of WPA workers would be called and if any one of them failed to attend they would be dropped from the projects.

LIE IS HURLED

Mullen admitted, however, that he had visited WPA workers on projects accompanied by C. Carroll Cunningham, WPA coordinator at Saugus, and had advised the workers that a change in the administration "might endanger their jobs."

"Pratt is a —— —— liar," declared Mullen. "It is just a political scheme of Pratt's to feather his own political nest."

The chairman also asserted he did not believe Pratt's statement that his information was derived from Cunningham, but Mullen added that if Cunningham had given Pratt such information—then Cunningham also was a —— —— liar."

Telegrams complaining of Mullen and his alleged actions were sent by Pratt, he said, to Chairman Joseph McGrath of the Democratic State Committee and to Paul Edwards, state administrator for the WPA.

DEMANDS PROBE

The telegram to McGrath read, according to Pratt:

"Do you, as chairman of the Democratic State Committee, approve the tactics of Selectman John J. Mullen of Saugus in threatening WPA workers with the loss of their jobs if they fail to attend a Democratic meeting in Saugus town hall Tuesday night?

"Selectman Mullen and C. Carroll Cunningham, WPA coordinator, visited local projects and Mullen attempted coercion and intimidation on the workers by telling them if they were not present at the roll call at the meeting they would lose their jobs.

"The planned meeting is nothing more than a political rally to further the candidacies of Governor Curley, Congressman Connery and other Democrats."

FIND FISHERMEN DEAD

Mystery Over Cape Sea Tragedy

Westport, Oct. 6—Missing for less than 24 hours after having gone fishing off Gooseberry Neck in a 12-foot power boat, Captain William A. Shockley, 78, of North Dartmouth, and Charles Manchester, 79, of New Bedford, were found dead in their boat off Ricketson's Point, near Dartmouth, today.

Puzzled concerning the cause of death, officials ordered an autopsy on Manchester's body. Captain Shockley was the oldest whaling captain in the New Bedford Whalemen's Club.

Captain Shockley and Manchester left on a fishing trip yesterday morning in a 12-foot boat and were last seen anchored off Gooseberry Neck, early in the afternoon.

As Shockley's body was being removed from the half submerged boat it slipped from hands of members of the rescue party and sank beneath the surface. Searchers immediately began grappling for the body.

Shockley sailed on 12 whaling vessels and was captain of ten, including the Charles W. Morgan, which is enshrined on the estate of the late Colonel E. H. R. Green of South Dartmouth.

RALLY CROWDS CHEER STATE DEMOCRATS

By WILLIAM C. CONWAY

Pittsfield, Oct. 6 — Governor James M. Curley today expressed himself as "completely satisfied with the reception accorded us by the Democrats of western Massachusetts."

"The crowds at the rallies last night were the biggest I have seen in this section of the state during any campaign," he said.

Other members of the state ticket also expressed themselves as being satisfied with the rally crowds. It is estimated that the candidates spoke to more than 500 persons throughout the day.

VISITED CASSIDY

Before Governor Curley departed from this city he visited Thomas Cassidy, chairman of the state racing commission, who is confined to St. Luke's Hospital at Williamstown.

James Roosevelt experienced what he later described "a very serious ordeal" when he was questioned about his father's administration by members of the Williams College Landon-for-President Club.

Roosevelt was called upon to answer about 25 questions concerning the administration policies. At the conclusion of his forum, however, the President's son was given a cordial send-off.

Francis B. Sayre, Jr., grandson of the late President Wilson, introduced young Roosevelt at the Williamstown rally.

SOCIAL JUSTICE

Governor Curley made a bid throughout the day for the Townsend the National Union for Social Justice vote in this section of the state.

At every rally the governor pointed out that during his term as mayor of Boston and as governor he had "put into practice many of the 16 principles of Social Justice."

State Treasurer Hurley, who is battling in Haigis' territory, was well received by audiences during the day.

The candidates addressed rallies in Lenox, Lee, West Stockbridge, Housatonic and Great Barrington. In all cases, the rallies were held outdoors, and at times the candidates stood only a few feet away from their listeners.

State Treasurer Hurley told the rally audiences he was not indulging in personalities when he attacks his opponent's "public record as a legislator."

"In my three campaigns for state treasurer I never engaged in personalities and I don't intend to start now," Hurley said. "I refuse to break down the door of a man's home to attack him or his family.

"As a man, I respect my opponent, but I differ with him in his economic philosophy. I have confined myself to an attack on his public record, and I will continue to do so throughout the campaign."

Landon Expected To Cancel N.E. Trip

New York, Oct. 6 (AP)—Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican eastern campaign manager, said today it is not expected now that Governor Alfred M. Landon would make another visit to New England in his campaign for President.

Martin said this would mean that an address, scheduled for Boston late this month, would be cancelled.

"This is not definitely decided," Martin said. "But we are inclined to think it would be better for Governor Landon to spend the rest of the campaign in other states where the battle is a little closer."

"Then you consider Massachusetts and other New England states are in the bag?" Martin was asked.

"Well," Martin replied, "we wouldn't do this if we didn't think so."

Definite decision on whether Governor Landon will come East again will be made within the next few days, Martin said.

Harvard Debaters Flay Roosevelt

His alma mater rose up against President Roosevelt last night as seven Harvard undergraduates riddled his candidacy for re-election while favoring that of Alfred M. Landon, in annual Debating Council tryouts for the University debating teams.

Only one speaker on the affirmative side of the trial question, "Resolved that Franklin Delano Roosevelt should be re-elected President," dared point to the New Deal platform promises, and the assertion of this speaker that Roosevelt had fulfilled pledges to aid home-owners and farmers was refuted by Landon supporters.

Personality and Roosevelt's Harvard connections seemed to be the dominant reason of those speakers who took the affirmative side of the question, while the well-substantiated statement that Landon will return the citizens of this country the advantages of a balanced budget, of a firm farm and relief policy, and of relief from inconsistency and broken promises, carried the Landon arguments.

The Senator

Some Lodge Money Floating About

When The Senator comes in there is a short cheer for the team.

THE SENATOR

"Senator," says Timmy, "the rest did you good. You are falling away to a long ton."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "my poundage is exactly the difference between an actual ton and a ton of city fire proof coal. Fluctuating. Speaking of coal makes me think of snow. Thinking of snow makes me think of contracts.

"Others are thinking of snow removal contracts. Some of the City Hall boys are thinking of snow removal contracts. So is the Edward M. Matz Company of Jamaica Plain. This company will probably come up with one. A snow removal contract is a very nice thing to have in your pocket.

"Speaking of snow removal contracts reminds me that Charlie Manser, snow removal contract investigator for the old Boston Finance Commission—the old commission, Timmy—was offering $1000 even money on Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., against Governor Jim at the Bellevue. Michael (Suley) Sullivan, of Governor Jim's boys, sought $400 of this at 2 to 1, but Charlie would not meet the odds. Later Charlie said he was willing to give 10 to 8. Sam Goodwin, pin-wheel man, is also reported to have a large chunk of money he is trying to wager at evens on Lodge. Sam is a great Gene Hultman man."

Chirping Birds

"Senator," says Timmy, "how do you get all this lowdown while lying in bed?"

"Birdies, Timmy," says The Senator. "A lot of the birdies are going south with secrets of their own, but they always have a story about the other fellow.

"I will tell you something else if you will not spread the news. Judge Patrick J. Duane, who was a good Roosevelt man, huddled yesterday with Frank Hurley, the big Jeffersonian Democrat. Today is the day the Jeffersonians will name the chairman of their executive committee.

"You see, I am positively bubbling over with secrets and I must get them off my chest."

"What chest is that, Senator?" says Timmy. "You have probably mistaken gas on the stomach for secrets on the chest."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "Mayor Freddie has been secretly working on that $8,500,000 Huntington avenue subway for a month and Johnny Dowd's order in the council yesterday was the tip-off that the way has been greased for the federal grant.

Seeking Proof

"Joe McGrath and Maurice Tobin who want his job next fall are again engaged in an under-cover dog fight. Jim Purcell is no longer Governor Jim's buddy. Councillor Uncle Dan Coakley has been feeling not so good since the primaries, getting a rest up in bed like myself, and his secretary Joe Flynn has been attending to matters of importance."

"He was not eating any cole slaw in here, Senator," says Timmy.

"Be that as it may, Timmy," says The Senator, "there were Roosevelt buttons in some of the WPA envelopes according to the boys at Republican state committee headquarters who are secretly seeking documentary proof for a large blast.

"However, there is another condition that is giving the Democratic state committee more worry than the source of Roosevelt buttons worn by WPA workers.

"I refer, Timmy, to an ultimatum that has been served on members of the committee by prominent Italian-American Democrats who recall that Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, their candidate for secretary of state again this year, ran about 19,000 behind the state ticket in the last election. They do not wish to see this happen this year and if it does there will be few Italian-American Democrats left. They will all become Republicans. They figure a little racial prejudice is the answer to why D. Santosuosso trailed and they want proof that this has been eliminated—or else. So the state committee will lean backward going down the line for Dr. Santosuosso.

Three Jobs

"My final secret of the day is the plotting already underway in Ward 16, Dorchester, seeking the defeat of City Councillor John J. McGrath next year. Dan Galvin, who made a good showing as a candidate last year, is organizing the opposition to McGrath and there will be a meeting this week of the five or six persons who had planned to be candidates so that one may be selected to run with the combined pledged support of the others. If you see McGrath tip him that he will be put on the spot for holding three jobs, city, state and his own real estate business."

With this The Senator descends from the bar stool with all the grace of a nimble sprite and prepares to away.

"Senator," says Timmy, "is it doctor's orders? You haven't had a drink yet."

"By golly, Timmy," says The Senator, climbing back on the stool, "I knew I came in here for something. A rye high, please, and see what the boys will have."

HAIGIS BLASTS HURLEY; FORTE HITS DEVER

By L. CONANT, JR.

Ability and merit rather than "political pull" will be the qualifications for public office when John W. Haigis becomes the next Governor of Massachusetts.

Such was the ringing declaration of the Republican gubernatorial candidate today as he reiterated his militant opposition to the "acts and policies of the present administration."

Referring to the continued silence of his Democratic New Deal rival, Charles F. Hurley to answer his questions on the Curley regime, Haigis asserted that the battle was already won.

"But what is his record?

"How about the dictatorship that has been set up on Beacon Hill by the ADMINISTRATION OF WHICH HE IS A PART.

"The citizens of Massachusetts want to know where the Democratic candidate for governor stands on this and other issues.

HALT SPENDING

"I have told the voters that I stand four-square for a return to sane and sound government in this state.

"I say that when I am governor there will be a halt to the wasteful spending of public money. That merit and ability will be the qualifications for public office rather than political pull.

SIMMONDS SPEAKS

Greatly cheered by the great Knox rally in Symphony Hall last night, the entire Republican ticket will campaign tonight in the two important communities of Palmer and Topsfield.

Major A. P. Simmonds, who played an important role in the victorious Maine campaign will be the guest speaker at the Topsfield rally.

Broadside after broadside was launched against Attorney-General Paul A. Dever in a fighting speech by Judge Felix Forte, Republican candidate for that office.

"Entangling political alliances have unfitted Dever for office," he charged.

"He has allowed the worst administration in the history of Massachusetts to go unchallanged, unchanged and unpunished.

"I call upon him to explain who provided the funds for his expensive campaign.

"I charge that Daniel H. Coakley, rather than Paul A. Dever, controls the office of the attorney-general.

"In the failure of Dever, the commonwealth has witnessed one of the great tragedies which has grown to be all too common in public life. A young man, promising enough in his earlier days—by the way, he was one of my students at Boston University Law School—makes the first grave mistake when he permits his future, and that means his private as well as his public life, to be corrupted by dangerous political entanglements.

New Dubinsky Red Link

$5000 Donation For Spain Defense

In a first-page box, the "Daily Worker," Moscow-dictated newspaper published in New York and circulated daily among Communists throughout New England, today revealed another $5000 donation to David Dubinsky for defense of the Spanish "Popular Front" (Red) government.

Dubinsky, calling himself a Socialist, is one of the Roosevelt electors in New York state and is one of the headliners in the New Deal election rally to be held by that faction of the Democratic party in Tremont Temple tonight.

First disclosure of the $5000 contribution of the Furriers Council of New York city to Dubinsky for aid of the Reds in Spain came in the Boston Sunday Advertiser when a facsimile of the donation check was published.

Today's "other" $5000 gist fas jublicized by the organ of the Communish party itself. It read:

"Another $5000 Is Given by IWO to Aid
In Defense of Spain.

"Emphasizing that the urgent call of the hard pressed defenders of Democracy in Spain for aid cannot go unanswered by any freedom-loving citizen, Max Bedacht, general secretary of the International Workers Order, announced yesterday that $5000 had been sent to the Spanish government.

"The money was given to David Dubinsky, who heads a committee raising $100,000 for the Spanish Popular Front fighters.

"A total of $900 has been contributed by the I. W. O. membership; $3000 was sent early last month."

TALKS HERE TONIGHT

The excuse set forth that Dubinsky was engaged in "Red Cross work" and had forwarded the first $5000 to that organization in Spain was wiped out today, definitely, by the boast of the "Daily Worker."

Yet Dubinsky appears in Tremont Temple tonight to urge the election of President Roosevelt, who had disclaimed that he seeks Communist support, but does not—as Colonel Frank Knox points out—explain why he is getting Communist support in his campaign for reelection.

On the same front-page of the Daily Worker, two columns away from the box that boasts the Dubinsky donation, Robert Minor, Communist party candidate for the governorship of New York, is quoted as pleading:

"Whatever you do, defeat Landon!"

Minor, says the Daily Worker, called for "speedy building of a Farmer-Labor Party, a genuine People's Front in the United States as the only solution . . ."

CURLEY REFUSES BID

Dubinsky, despite the fact that he heads a committee for the defense of the Reds in Spain, was chosen by New Deal strategists as one of the principal speakers in a Roosevelt rally this evening in Boston.

Others chosen included Mayor Fiorella La Guardia, Socialist-Republican chief executive of New York city; Sidney Hillman, former Socialist leader in New York state, and Governor Curley, New Deal candidate for U. S. Senator from Massachusetts.

But Governor Curley, as well as other state candidates for office on the "Democratic" ticket, all had excuses for not appearing on the Tremont Temple platform with this array.

The governor pleaded that he would be "out of town" on another engagement.

ROOSEVELT OFF ON TOUR FRIDAY

Washington, Oct. 6 (INS)—President Roosevelt returned to Washington today for a three-day breathing spell before heading out again Friday on another campaign trip that will carry him as far west as Denver and Cheyenne.

Ahead of the President was a merry-go-round encirclement of territory that has been represented to him as doubtful.

Nebraska, Illinois, and Michigan were three states on which Mr. Roosevelt planned to bear down heavily in the course of his final-month bid for retention of the White House.

Although the Democratic high command has passed the word along that President Roosevelt is a sure winner, the executive has received other reports which have convinced him he should strike vigorously into certain states in an effort to clinch the election.

EXPECT GRISLY FINDS IN NEXT 48 HOURS

weighted down or would have come to the surface before the legs.

His findings, tentative and based upon minute examination of only one of the recovered limbs, galvanized the detective and uniformed branches of the police into diversified but correlated action seeking solution of the baffling crime.

Last night's most likely theory—that the girl died as a result of illegal surgery at the hands of a medical man who sought to save his reputation—was dissipated by Dr. Brickley's assertion that positive findings indicated the victim had never been a mother or expectant mother.

FIND NEW CLUES

With murder the apparent alternative answer, dragging efforts between the airport and Governor's Island were redoubled and the search reached down the harbor to Deer Island where a girl's pink slip, a strip of bed sheeting and a surgeon's rubber glove were found on the shore.

As these were added to the two grim, human exhibits in the morgue, a second rubber glove, a large stained rag and a pair of men's overalls and shorts were found rolled up behind the seawall near the Jeffries Point Yacht Club, a short distance from the scene of the finding of the legs.

These were only possible clues. Positive clues remained the two sacks that held the legs, the cord and lacing used to tie them.

"C. LINE" LETTERING

One of these sacks, instead of bearing the printed word "Cline" as first supposed, was found to be lettered "C. Line." Investigation immediately began to determine if it had been the property of a Boston firm.

The other sack was lettered "Maine Selected Potatoes." Detectives were trying to trace the origin of these, chemists trying to bring out any lettering which might have been washed out by action of the salt water.

Possible eventual solution, as in New York's Nancy Titterton case, may come from the twine which is being inspected by experts.

LEGS X-RAYED

The approximate age of the victim was established by Dr. Brickley in co-operation with Dr. Ariel George, the X-ray expert for the government in the Millen case.

Using the leg found off the airport bulkhead yesterday afternoon, they established by X-ray that the joint and bone condition was that of a female who had attained her maximum of growth, that the joints were in a condition indicating she was not over 40. That she was younger appeared likely from the fact that the knee had been flexed without breaking so that the heel touched the thigh.

Medical Examiner Brickley said:

"In the sense of the word surgical, this was not a surgical job, but might have been done by a surgical man attempting to disguise his knowledge.

BUTCHER, FISHERMAN?

"Several cuts were made which were not at all useful in the dismembering. It might possibly have been the work of a butcher or a fisherman used to cutting up large fish.

"There are no moles, vaccination mark or anything of that nature to aid in identification.

"The hair on the leg, dark, had been shaved at least once. Pigmentation denotes white woman.

"As far as can be determined from a smill piece of one organ found, this woman had never been pregnant.

"It is the opinion of both Dr. George and myself that she was closer to 25 years of age than to 40.

"She was about five feet, two or three inches in height. Her weight was between 118 and 125

WORE FITTED SHOES

"Her feet were in excellent condition, without trace of bunions or corns or distortion of the toes. She had worn shoes that fitted.

"The arches were excellent. The feet indicated a vigorous constitution. They were strong and suggested a lot of walking.

"A marl type of clay and shale had sifted into one of the bags and adhered to the leg. This particular type of clay is found along the shore of South Boston and along a submerged ledge from the South Boston shore to Governor's Island.

BITTEN BY RATS

"No marks of clay were on the other leg which appeared to have been bitten by rats, suggesting that it had been washed ashore. Both legs may have been floating around for some time. Black cinders of the type found at the airport shore were with the other leg.

"If the legs had been in channel water, say 35 or 40 feet it would have taken from three to four weeks for them to come to the surface. If they had been in shallow water, say eight or 10 feet, they would have come up in from a week to 10 days.

"I am led to believe that the torso must be weighted down. It would have more readily filled with gases and come to the surface quicker.

SAWED ABOVE HIPS

"The body was cut across above the hips. A saw was used but I cannot yet say of what type, whether surgical or not. The legs were then separated. All organs were removed except the part of one organ found."

Dr. Brickley said the third sack, found off Jeffries Point Yacht Club after midnight did not contain the missing organs or anything having any connection with the case.

Despite the new opinion that the case is one of murder rather than illegal surgery, Detectives Arthur M. Tiernan and Joseph Decker went into East Boston this afternoon seeking for questioning a woman who was involved in an illegal operation case less than three years ago.

Of the three Deer Island clues, the slip appeared to offer the most promise of leading to the identity of the victim pending the finding of her head.

PINK PONGEE SLIP

It was of pink pongee, cut low in back and front for wear with evening or sun-tan dress, with a lace collar, somewhat torn, and an arm-pit perspiration guard, also torn.

It was of a size that would, with the prevailing skirt length have been worn by a girl possibly five feet five inches tall.

STAINS ON GARMENT

House of Correction Officers James B. Connolly and Eppolitto Parziale found the garment at the foot of Muddy Bluff by Deer Island Light point, just above the high water mark. It was dry, but crumpled, and bore water stains, also a variety of other stains, brown, black and green.

The surgeon's glove was found by William Michelfelder, Boston Evening American reporter, who went to Deer Island to join the searching party, when Master George F. A. Mulcahy, in the knowledge that the island lies directly in the drift of the ebb tide from the East Boston shore, detailed seven prisoners and officers to search the beach.

Description Of Victim

A tentative description of the girl whose legs were found in Boston Harbor was furnished by Medical Examiner William J. Brickley today as follows:

Five feet two inches tall.

Size of shoe, 3.

She was between 25 and 40 years old.

It was size 7½, its cut indicating a long, slim hand. The size was stamped upon it, together with "D22" and name of manufacturer, Seamless Rubber Co., New Haven, Conn.

GLOVE THUMB CUT OFF

In the opinion of Dr. Schwartz, who tested the flex of the rubber, it had not been in the water more than 48 hours.

Seamless Rubber Company reparted that D22 werely signified a factory worker. E. F. Mahady, distributor of Seamless products in this district, said it would be practically impossible to trace the glove because its like is sold to thousands of doctors in New England.

TORN SHEET FOUND

The sheeting was found by one of the prisoners in the party led by Assistant Deputy Masters Robert F. Mackie and William F. Reilly. It was about 1000 feet from the glove.

It was about five by four feet in size, apparently cut out of a large sheet and its lower half had been cut and sewed like the tail of a swallow-tail coat.

Dr. Schwartz said it was cut as sheets are cut sometimes for use during abdominal operations on women. Rust-colored marks on it are to be analyzed. It is not a sheeting from the House of Correction.

The report of a West End husband that his 29-year-old wife, mother of two children, had been missing since September 21, and had relatives in East Boston, was eliminated as a clue by Dr. Brickley's hypothetical reconstruction of the victim's physique.

The missing wife weighed 168 pounds.

Authorities were convinced that other portions of the body would be found in the same general area that yesterday gave up the legs.

Search directed by the police boat Edwin U. Curtis, including grappling between the airport and the island, was based on the belief that the two bundles came to the surface from the muddy bottom only yesterday and had been in the water 10 days or three weeks.

BODY FIRST HIDDEN

Disposal of the body, at least, was undertaken not earlier than July 12, a fact established by a Sunday newspaper of that date being found wrapped about the right leg.

The finding places, considered with relation to prevailing winds and tide currents as established by police in conference with navy officials, pointed to the two bundles recovered as having entered the harbor from East Boston, the Atlantic avenue waterfront of the city proper, South Boston, Charlestown or Winthrop.

GRUESOME JIG-SAW

The death is believed to have occurred in the same area.

The mystery was a gruesome jig-saw puzzle, with the key pieces missing and, although many other angles of investigation developed, the search to complete the corpus delicti was the most important.

Several water posses resulted from widespread interest in the case. Many residents along the East Boston and Winthrop shore joined in the search, using their own small boats.

INSPECT ISLANDS

Other harbor islands are to be inspected and later, if the head and torso are not found, search will extend along the Chelsea and Charlestown shores.

The possibility that the missing ts had been weighted and that omposition will never ause them rise to the surface or that they been otherwise and elsewhere posed of were bridges the police used to cros unless the present rch fails. Then divers and airplanes may used.

GIRLS MISSING

At police headquarters, reports at 300 girls were missing in Bos- n alone were being checked in tail for similarity of description that approximated for the vic- n by Dr. Brickley. Some of these, it was learned, had been returned to their homes without any notification having been given police.

ILLEGAL SURGERY ANGLE

The case, paralleling in many aspects the death of Susanna Geary in 1905, caused police to speculate on the series of similar crimes in the Boston area which have occurred during the last three decades and have always resulted in solution.

In all the cases on record, illegal surgery which resulted in death, caused dismemberment of the bodies and attempts to dispose of the remains.

While the police boat groped through the harbor in search for other parts of the apparently dissected body, homicide squad officers on land were checking other meager clues.

The burlap bags, similar to those in which potatoes are sacked, led police to Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, where numerous potato warehouses are located.

Efforts were being made to ascertain whether any employes of these concerns had left their jobs within the last few weeks or in the past 24 hours, on news of the gruesome find being made public.

LAY ON BEACH

Present indications are, police said, that the remains were disposed of from the deserted southeast corner of the airport and that all the separate packages are in that vicinity.

The two packages already found were located in an area encompassed by a few hundred feet.

'Boy Meets Girl' Premiere On Socialites' Calendar

By BETTY ALDEN

THE BOY met the girl at the Plymouth last evening, but though the theater was packed with a most appreciative audience, he did not meet Boston's usually brilliant crowd of socially prominent first nighters . . .

It was really his own fault, for he first met the girl in New York some time ago . . . and the play describing the meeting turned out to be such a success that a great majority of Boston's social theater lovers included it in their list of shows to see on recent trips to Gotham . . .

CAROLINE HUNNEWELL

Evidently Caroline Hunnewell was too busy to see it last week when she made a brief visit in New York, for she appeared at the opening at the Plymouth last evening, esquired by the tall and handsome Eddie Nash . . . Caroline's gunmetal lame dinner dress was very effective with her honey colored hair and tiara of pearls set in antique gold . . .

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Rice of Westwood added a bit of social distinction to the audience . . . and their Dover neighbors, the Robert Gorham Fullers (Connie Bader), were in a jolly group who had come on from dining together . . . Connie's long beige brocaded wrap had very heavy cotton fringe around the neck . . . much like the rope fringe that used to adorn the portieres in the front parlor . . .

Barbara Bradford, who dabbles in oils with some very pleasing results, was also at the theater . . . and Betty Soule of Brookline laughed as heartily as any one in the audience at the sparkling lines and comic situations in the unfolding of the plot . . .

Mrs. Richard Olney, Jr., was another Dover resident in the throng and Mrs. Charles Kincaid, the former Mrs. Knowles Gray, was with her attractive husband . . . she wore a fallish suit with a deep rust satin blouse and high-crowned Tyrolean chapeau . . .

Many Dinners to Precede Premiere

FASHIONABLE HOSTESSES are not saying "Dinner at eight" when extending invitations to their friends to dine with them tomorrow evening . . . for contrary to usual custom dinners are being served early and there will be no time for lingering over coffee and cigarettes before hosts, hostesses and guests hurry off to the Colonial Theater in time for the first curtain of "Red, Hot and Blue," the new Cole Porter musical show . . .

The world premiere of this show tomorrow evening will benefit the Community Health Association, and Mrs. Gardiner Fiske, who has been most active in making arrangements for the affair, will entertain several guests before going on to the theater . . . In her party will be Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Rollins, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Holmes of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Blanchard . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Hollingsworth will dine with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred McIntyre, the latter of whom is a member of the board of managers of the Community Health Association . . . Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Aldrich and Mrs. Almy Adie will each have dinner parties for six friends before the opening . . .

She is registered as a volunteer worker at the Floating Hospital . . . which means nine to five nearly every day . . . and she plans to start the New Year as a nurse in training at the Children's Hospital . . .

The Marions returned to Concord, about two weeks ago, from their summer home in South Dartmouth . . . Elizabeth and her aunt, Mrs. Edward Moore of Concord, spent the early part of the summer motoring through the British Isles and returned about August 1 . . .

Joan Jacoby, another of last winter's debs, has aspirations of being a journalist, and as the first step in equipping herself for her career has begun a secretarial course at the Pierce School . . .

Joan has never been one to let the grass grow under her feet . . . As soon as she finished her education at Chatham Hall in Virginia and Beaver Country Day, she found a job in a Coolidge Corner shop . . . then, when the social obligations of her first year out demanded more time than that job allowed her, she signed up as a volunteer at the Boston Dispensary to work several days a week . . .

She is the daughter of Mrs. Ernest Jacoby of Brookline and was presented at a large luncheon about a year ago . . .

DAY REMAINS FOR CONTEST

She's 'Other Woman'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

It is the eve of the close of the Dodsworth contest. You have 24 hours to compete for a trip to that isle where your dreams become reality, Nassau.

The deadline is the mystical hour of midnight on October 7. No letter dated later than midnight of October 7 will be considered.

Nassau, where they caper a wicked tango, and wriggle a better rhumba. Let that be your goal. Make it your destiny.

"Should Sam take Fran back?"

Did you peruse the pages of Sinclair Lewis' Nobel prize winning novel, Dodsworth, from which Sam Goldwyn is producing his picture which is to appear at the Loew's State and Orpheum theaters, beginning October 9?

It concerns hard-working, ambitious, home-loving Sam Dodsworth. All that a husband and father should be. Perhaps a little on the too-practical side. Needed, certainly, is a little imagination, a little romance, in his make-up.

Fran, his wife, sits on the other end of the see-saw. Hers is a personality that doesn't exactly become middle-age. Charming in a youngster of 18, but, perhaps, to a sober-minded critic, a little ridiculous in a grandmother—this dreaming dreams of Prince Charmings.

Other Awards

Fran's dreams reach a high pitch when she arrives on the European scene and meets Baron Kurt Von Obersdorf.

But the rude awakening is the birth of daughter Emily's child. In facing reality, common sense comes rushing back.

Meanwhile, Sam has met Edith Cortright. She brings peace to a harried soul.

What should Sam and Fran do? Should they begin anew?

You decide. And mail your decision in writing to me at the following address: Dodsworth Contest, Beatrice Fairfax, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

Make your answer short. No more than 100 words. It's simple like that.

Remember there's a sea trip on one of the giant Cunard-White Star luxury liners to Nassau, Nassau where one can doff New England inhibitions with one's winter woolies, waiting for you, not to forget a two-day stopover at the Park Central Hotel in New York.

In addition to the aforementioned awards, there is a $100 handsome Gruen watch that is going to the writer of the second best letter.

What's more there are cash awards. They include gifts of $25, $10, $5, $3, and $2.

And that isn't all. The Loew's State and Orpheum theaters which are sponsoring this contest with the Boston Evening American are giving away 35 pairs of tickets for the week of October 9 when Dodsworth will be shown there.

MARY ASTOR

But the end draws near. And opportunity soon passes. Make the most of it now. Grasp it. Sit down and write me now.

I want to hear from you.

Few Simple Test Rules

All letters shall answer the question: SHOULD SAM TAKE FRAN BACK?

None shall exceed 100 words.

No letter received after midnight, October 7, shall be considered.

Second: $100 Gruen man's or woman's watch.

Third: $25 cash.

Fourth: $10 cash.

Seventh: $3. And Eighth: $2.

Thirty-five next best letters: Each a pair of tickets to "Dodsworth" at Loew's State or Orpheum Theaters.

Friends Fete Future Brides

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

FALL CALENDAR presents an interesting array of luncheon dates, teas and buffet suppers, all in honor of the season's brides-to-be.

Katharine Glynn, whose wedding to Joseph Tomasello is slated for a Saturday morning in St. Patrick's Church in Roxbury was the guest of honor at a recent luncheon at the Myles Standish. Marie Kelley, who is to be maid of honor, was hostess at a dinner at her home and this evening Kay is entertaining members of her bridal party at dinner at the Fox and Hounds club.

Rev. Remi Schuver, chaplain of St. John's Preparatory School, will officiate at the wedding which will be followed by a reception at the Copley-Plaza.

Theodore Glynn will give his daughter in marriage and serving as maid of honor will be Marie Kelley of Dorchester. Preceding the bride altarward will be a galaxy of attendants, Gloria Freda of Brookline, Rose Tomasello of Jamaica Plain, Mary Good of Roxbury and Helen McCarthy of Jamaica Plain.

The bride-elect's brother, Theodore Glynn, Jr., will act as best man and the usher group is headed by Frederick A. Tilton of Laconia, N. H. Others include Warren Rowe of Belmont, John J. Connell of Dorchester, Joseph P. McGinn of East Boston, Henry Freda of Brookline and Edward Brais of Dorchester.

Miss Glynn was graduated from St. Patrick's High School and Boston Teachers' College. Mr. Tomasello prepared for Villanova College at St. John's Preparatory School. He also studied at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mary Donnelly Honored

Margaret Donovan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Donovan of Newton, is giving a buffet supper Sunday evening at her home for Mary Donnelly, whose wedding to Gerard Moore takes place a week from Saturday in Sacred Heart Church, Newton Center.

A round of festivities has been preceding the wedding. Anna Farrell of Newton, who is to be honor attendant at the nuptials, gave a luncheon at the Copley-Plaza Saturday for the bride-elect, and Dorothy Mullin, who is also serving as a wedding attendant, was hostess at luncheon at her home.

Margaret Donovan, the evening's hostess, will also take part in the wedding procession. Other attendants will be Betty Hennessey of Brookline, who is entertaining Saturday at luncheon at the Abner Wheeler House, and Mary Moore, sister of the groom-elect.

Among the guests at the affair will be Mr. and Mrs. Edward McGreenery, Mr. and Mrs. Russell F. Riley, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Donovan and Mrs. Richard Nolan.

Mt. St. Joseph Alumnae Meets

Annual reunion banquet of Mount Saint Joseph Alumnae Association took place Sunday at the academy in Brighton. The charming toastmistress of the occasion was Mrs. Sydney Dunn of Dorchester, president of the Regis College Guild.

Mrs. Leo Birmingham of Milton, ambitious president of the group, received a vote of thanks. Bi-annual election of officers took place at the affair. Corsage bouquets were presented as tokens of appreciation to the former presidents of the alumnae and officers.

Serving as an executive committee for the next two years are Mrs. Leo Birmingham, Mrs. Frank McKeen, Ellean Ahearn, Margaret McKenna, Margaret Kennedy, Mrs. John Morrison and Eleanor Devlin.

Rev. Leo P. McCaulay, S. J., of Boston College, was the day's speaker. His topic was "St. Francis of Assisi."

PEGGY DOYLE RUBY KEELER

Ruby Keeler, who is Mrs. Al Jolson, in her Hollywood home, right, and Peggy Doyle, Boston Evening American reporter, in Hollywood. Miss Doyle is interviewing the movie stars in their homes, and having a lot of fun out of it.

This is the tenth of a series of intimate articles in which Peggy Doyle, Boston Evening American staff writer, interviews film notables in their Hollywood homes. Today's star is Ruby Keeler.

By PEGGY DOYLE

Hollywood, Oct. 6—Sonny, the 1½-year-old boy Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler adopted from the famous Cradle, in Evanston, Ill., when he was seven weeks old, has been walking for the past four months, and that's the biggest news that's happened to Ruby in ages.

He's the smartest, the cutest, the healthiest baby that ever was, and he couldn't be dearer to Ruby and Al Jolson if he had been given the name of Al Jolson, Jr., by right of natural inheritance instead of by reason of the sheer magic of his winsome smile and clinging, chubby arms.

"He's our sun, moon and stars," says Ruby, and THAT is THAT.

It was midsummer in autumn today when I was introduced to Sonny, in a bright blue sunsuit. He has golden-brown hair, dark eyes, honey-colored skin and a perfect disposition.

His mother left him with his nurse while she showed me through the far-flung two-story English farmhouse, with its white-painted brick walls and its shingled roof, that is one of the loveliest places in the San Fernando Valley. It is located in Encino.

Completely charming it is, with its carpet of faded French blue, its peach-toned walls of dulled, grass-cloth-like Chinese paper, its French pastoral painting over the brick-lined fireplace, its chairs of yellow burgundy and yellow, peach and burgundy striped damask, its yellow drapes and screens with a formal design of a girl in a swing handpainted in burgundy, yellow, peach and blue and its yellow lamps.

Opening onto it is the sunporch, its color scheme blue and white with yellow accents. White iron grills decorate the double door connecting the living-room and sunporch and at either side of the door are large windows with white iron grillwork shelves supporting white flower-pots blooming with ivy and rhododendron and white geraniums.

You can walk into the dining-room from the sunporch, and so we did.

"Don't you adore the scenic wallpaper?" asked Ruby, with such unaffected delight that you had to remind yourself again that this unspoiled, sweet girl with the wide, frank blue eyes was the chatelaine of this very extensive and beautiful home and a famous dancer as well. She was a star of Ziegfeld's biggest and most recent hits, "Whoopee" and "Showgirl."

The deeply-pleated yellow satin drapes with their heavy matching narrow silk fringe made a nice harmony with the burgundy carpet and the oak furniture.

"We spend a great deal of time here," said Ruby, indicating the recreation room, with its walls of knotted pine, its off-white ceiling and i's inviting red-brick fireplace.

Bar, Fireplace

There is a very workmanlike bar to the left of the fireplace with bar-stools covered with red-leather. A globe of the world provides the decorative note for the ceiling lighting fixture.

Ruby's bedroom with its peach drapes and with its canopied bed, its peach satin canopy intricately quilted, is as fresh-looking and restful on the eyes as an apple-tree in full blossom.

"We love our house, Al and I," said the rather shy, reserved Ruby, in a burst of confidence. "For the first time we have that feeling of home and not a place we're just pausing in between trips to New York.

"Al and (they celebrated their ninth wedding anniversary this month) I always used to be dashing to Palm Springs or Florida in the old days, but since we have Sonny and this place we've become regular Darby and Joan stayathomes.

"Do look out that window? Did you ever see such a beautiful view? Do you wonder we love living here?"

We were up in Ruby's room, and looking across the valley we could see the mist-hung Sierra Nevadas far off in the distance. As far as we could see were these sharply chiselled mountain-peaks, purple against the blue sky, and making a perfect zone of silence.

"I've never been happier in my life," revealed little Mrs. Jolson, who's five foot three, weighs 100 pounds and is the celluloid's first woman golfer (she was runner-up in the recent California woman's golf tournament).

"Despite the bigness of our house here, it is as homelike to me as a little house we lived in on P street, South Boston, when I was 12 years old, the year before I went into the chorus in New York. Mother (Ruby purchased the Bing Crosby home for her and she is living in it now) says so, too."

And they do say that the Cradle is about to add to the Jolsons' cup of joy—that a baby girl from that noted foundling home is about to be adopted into the family as a sister for Sonny.

Another interview with a movie star at home by Peggy Doyle will appear in the Boston Evening American tomorrow. It is with Glenda Farrell.

Miss Thomas Weds Today

The Philip L. Spaldings of Milton are in New York today to attend the wedding of their son, Philip Spalding, to Emily Augusta Thomas daughter of Mrs. Seth Edward Thomas of Morristown, N. J., at Redgate, the home of the bride's mother.

Miss Thomas is the daughter of the late Seth Edward Thomas, Jr., president of the Seth Thomas Clock Company of Thomaston, Conn. Mr. Spalding prepared for college at Milton Academy and graduated from Harvard with the class of 1925. He is a member of the Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770, D. K. E. and A. D. Clubs, and of the New York Stock Exchange.

"GIVE ME YOUR HEART"

A NEW SERIAL

By Lewis Allen Browne

A COSMOPOLITAN PRODUCTION
RELEASED BY WARNER BROTHERS

CHAPTER 31

"Whereabouts, in England?"

"Melford Downs."

"Oh yes, Bill has mentioned that place. English towns have such queer names, perfectly laughable names, like Basingstroke and Woolsey Hants."

Quite. Not at all like such American towns as Skowhegan, or Hackensack, or Tallapoosa, or Smackover—"

"I surrender!" Florence exclaimed, holding up her arms, "but to get back to the Lord Farringtons—Bill lived neighbors to them, you say?"

"A half-mile from Farrington Castle."

"Strange she never mentioned them. Are they nice?"

"They can speak English and don't eat with their knives."

"Never mind the sarcasm."

"The family name is Melford, hence the town, it's a village, really, is Melford Downs."

"Look here, Tubbs—is there any reason why Bill has never mentioned them?"

"Who knows a woman's reasons, my dear girl."

"Tubbs! I haven't been called a girl since the Magna Carta was signed. How lovely of you. But the wool refuses to slide down."

"That's a sort of metaphor—too deep."

"You are being evasive, trying to pull the wool over my eyes. Is there any reason, I repeat, why did Bill never mention Lord and Lady Farrington?"

Plotting

"Linda never met Rosamond."

"Rosamond?"

"Lady Farrington."

"I see, or think I see. Lord Farrington wasn't married when Bill left home—perhaps she was disappointed."

"Oh, yes, he was. Robert was married when Linda was around sixteen, I would say."

"Robert is Lord Farrington? You are as friendly as that?"

"Yes, Lady Farrington was an invalid, is now, in a way, but better now. She never went about, then."

"Tubbs, are you plotting something?"

"Plotting, my dear?"

"Don't try to evade by being parrot-like. You are plotting something against my beloved Bill! I won't have it!"

"I love Linda as sincerely as you do, Florence. I have known her almost from infancy."

"You may mean all right, Tubbs, but the way to damn a person is to say that he means well. If you are plotting something you are arousing my mother heart."

"I am overjoyed to learn that you have a mother heart."

"All women have—only the fools deny it. You know how I am trying to help Bill."

"I believe that I do. Keep on calling her Bill, but she will always be 'Linda' to me. Yes, you are trying to help her. So am I."

"I am a doctor."

"But I have the great advantage over you." Florence saw that he had become suddenly serious.

"What advantage?"

"Ed Barrow—is this true?"

Tubbs nodded, gravely.

"You should have told me—helped me."

"Florence, even after we are married, I won't tell you, if I can bring Linda back to normalcy with my plan."

"After we are married—who? Us?" Florence laughed shrilly when he again nodded soberly. "Clever, aren't you—saying that to jolt my mind away from the subject."

"We will take that up at another conference, my dear."

"Is there any danger—just what can it mean—Bill to meet these people?"

"You agree that it cannot make her much worse—she is on the verge of a grave breakdown now. Will you stand back of me tonight, Florence? Be my strong right arm, my guide and support?"

"I think I have no alternative. I shall have to have confidence in you. Hey—look at the time!"

"Splendid—I'll be a bit late and Linda will know that I am still running true to form."

They went down to get a taxi.

Jim's car was a few minutes late. He fretted nervously in the apartment foyer. He had a horror of being late at any appointment. Linda, already struggling against jangling nerves, was having greater difficulty at self-control because of Jim's nervousness.

"It won't matter, darling," she said, when he growled about his tardy chauffeur. "Tubbs was never on time. He always gloried in being a bit late."

"That's the literary mind, Bill—always impractical."

Their car arrived. The door man came in and announced.

As Jim helped Linda in he noted her sparkling eyes, her excellent color. It puzzled him. He did not guess that it was another case of "nerves" with her, that something, probably what is so inadequately termed "woman's intuition," had made her fairly tense with some inexplicable apprehension.

"You're Gorgeous"

"Bill—you're gorgeous tonight," he said.

"Thanks, darling."

"Your friend, Barrow, will take back to your English friends most astounding reports of your beauty."

"I'm not a jury, Jim, you don't have to flatter me."

"I couldn't."

Even with the lateness of Jim's chauffeur, he and Linda arrived at the Carlton cocktail room ahead of Tubbs and Florence. They sat at a small table, near a side wall, not far from the ornate bar, where Tubbs could easily find them.

"We are awaiting our host," Jim explained to the captain, who came over with a waiter. This captain knew both Jim and Linda.

"See, darling? I told you. Tubbs is always late. You can pretend you were on the dot. He will never know."

"For once I am glad someone is late. How about a cocktail while we are waiting?"

"No thanks, I think I shall do without any tonight."

Dance Frock Like Gay Black Moth

FLIGHTY and young, and a little absurd in its exaggeration—one reason for its charm — is this black moire taffeta dance frock. It belongs to someone very young and very gay. It will go to a Noel Coward matinee, it will dance afterwards and see at least three of the town's gayest spots! For it was designed for the festive times when the best dancer you know is in attendance. Chosen by the Fashion Congress, and modeled by Miss Betty Sagendorph.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

IN THE TROPICS, women in rags walk like queens, from the custom of balancing heavy baskets, bundles and water jars on their heads. While these women walk regally from necessity, a famous Paris couturier was not above borrowing their posture practice for training her mannequins to catch the eye of the American trade. Unless the mannequin walked well, the most beautiful gown could not be displayed to advantage.

Try walking about the room with a heavy book on your head, and see what it does for your posture—and for your figure. The legs swing from the hips in smooth, controlled movements, with no jerky, disconnected action of the knees—else the book will slide off. Almost without any effort on your part, your shoulders will go back. And to keep the top of your head level, up goes the chin in a lovely horizontal line.

Anyone can learn to walk well by practicing this little library trick for a few minutes each day, and by taking separate steps for the correction of poor head carriage, rounded shoulders and swayback.

Stand as tall as possible, with your head held up by the muscles at the sides of the neck, to counteract the forward head and neck tendency.

Swayback takes time for correction, but the results are worth it. When this hollow is corrected, not only will the back appear graceful, but the protruding abdomen will assure a normal flat line. This exaggerated curve usually goes with rounded shoulders. Straighten one and the other is improved.

Stiffness contributes to awkward posture. Before you can develop a lovely carriage you must get the feeling of flexibility in your spine. Lie on the floor and flatten your back into a straight line. Try pulling the abdominal muscles up and in while lying flat on the back.

Send for two sets of exercises; "Abdominal Exercises" and "General Exercises." Both sets will help you with your posture. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the editor of this paper.

Good Manners

TIPS TO WAITRESS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been offered a position as a waitress in a hotel in Bermuda, and I am in doubt if waiting on the table in hotels is formal or informal. What are the requirements of a good waitress? What counts more, proper waiting or personality? S.

The table service of any well-run hotel anywhere would be classified as formal; that is, the management establishes for itself a definite standard of service, chooses its dining-room attendants to carry out this standard, trains them to co-operate in taking care of every detail that will maintain this standard.

Personality is important—it always is, in every position—but in a waitress, it doesn't count as much as the qualities that combine for excellent service. Appearance is of great importance. She must have a quick, never-failing eye to see what is to be done, in routine and exigencies, and a deft hand to do what is to be done. She must be unruffled, poised, quick. The successful waitress has a quiet, unobtrusive manner . . . that's why her "personality" is secondary to her waitress-efficiency.

Detail should never weary her, and she should be willing to cultivate nice ways of carrying out details. And underneath all of these qualities and always surrounding them should be her perfect sense of co-operation, co-operation with employers and co-operation with the guests. And, of course, no matter how stormy the provocation, she must never "talk back" to a guest.

If an exigency arises, an unusual request, a complaint, and it is not within her province to deal with it, she quickly takes her problem to a higher authority, the headwaiter usually.

Beauty

Pimple Lotion, Pore Paste Bring Amazing Results

By ARLINE GOULD

"PLEASE HELP ME—I need it so! My face has been marred lately with a crop of pimples and enlarged pores, so that my life has become miserable. I'm young and love a good time, but while my skin is in this condition I wouldn't accept a date, even if I were invited to go out."

Heartbreaking requests such as these come often to my desk, so today I'm going to tell about a pimple lotion which is little short of miraculous.

Pimples, as you know, are caused by some internal disorder, which may be induced by nervousness, acidity, improper diet or faulty elimination.

However, where there is an active pimple condition, this lotion will be found most helpful. It has a tendency to dry up the pimples, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

It is not expensive and is very easily applied. And for pimples which are only surface eruptions, it is all that is needed to dry them up. The lotion may be applied before going to bed with a piece of cotton dabbed on each eruption.

When you hold the cotton against the skin, enough lotion clings to the face to work the cure. Allow it to dry and remain on all night. If you find it convenient to apply during the daytime, brush off the sediment which remains on the skin and then make-up may be harmlessly applied!

The same manufacturers put out a lotion for enlarged pores which is equally effective. It not only refines the pores but greatly improves the texture of the skin.

This lotion is put on a dry piece of cotton and is applied with long upward strokes. It removes every trace of grease, closes the pores and leaves the skin deliciously refreshed.

It's grand to use when your face feels droopy after a trying day and you want to look your sparkling best in the evening.

If you do have an unfavorable skin condition, it is a good idea to direct attention to eyes, lips and hair by effective make-up and good grooming. If the skin does not clear up after these preparations have been given a fair trial, it is well to consult a skin specialist.

For information about the pimple and enlarged pore lotions, telephone Arline Gould, Liberty 4000. Or write her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

I'M TICKLED PINK! MY CONCORD GRAPE PIE WON FIRST PRIZE AT THE FAIR
I KNEW THE CRUST WOULD BE TENDER AND FLAKY IF YOU MADE IT WITH Spry. TRY Spry FOR LIGHTER CAKES AND TASTIER FRIED FOODS, TOO

NOW! cakes and pies doubly delicious . . . and as digestible as plain bread
—with new EXTRA-creamed shortening

No wonder her Concord Grape Pie won, hands down. The filling is new, spicy, tantalizing—the crust the tenderest and flakiest ever. For it's made with Spry, the new, purer ALL-vegetable shortening that's EXTRA-creamed.

Try her recipe at right. You'll find Spry cuts into the flour so easily you hardly need to handle the dough at all. And how it lightens cake-baking labors! With Spry you can mix a cake in half the time. And it will be lighter, more delicate, too.

Fry with Spry, too. Foods will be crisp, golden, tender and as easy to digest as if baked or boiled. Follow the example of more than 3 million women. Try Spry. You'll never go back to old-fashioned shortenings again!

Try this prize-winning
CONCORD GRAPE PIE

4 cups Concord grapes
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ teaspoon cloves
1 recipe Spry Pie Crust

Slip grapes from skins. Steam pulp in double boiler for 20 minutes. Press through coarse sieve to remove seeds. Add strained pulp to skins. Combine sugar, salt, tapioca, and cloves; add to grapes. Let stand while pie crust is being made. Roll ½ of Spry Pie Crust dough ⅛-inch thick and line a 9-inch pie plate. Fill pie shell with grape mixture. Roll remaining dough for top crust and cut a few slits. Fit top crust over grapes and seal edge of pie. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 30 to 40 minutes. Give generous servings—tender Spry pastry is easy to digest.

SPRY PIE CRUST

2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup Spry (the digestible shortening)
5 tablespoons cold water (about)

Sift flour and salt together. Add ½ of Spry and cut in until mixture is as fine as corn meal (so much quicker and easier with ready-creamed Spry). Add remaining Spry and continue cutting until particles are size of a navy bean. Sprinkle water, 1 tablespoon at a time, over mixture. With a fork, work lightly together until a dough is formed.

YOU'LL LOVE Spry! IT'S PURER, WHITER, SMOOTHER. CREAMS IN HALF THE TIME!
ALREADY 3 MILLION WOMEN ALL OVER THE COUNTRY HAVE USED IT

Susanna Judge Frowns On Dialect in Verses

Mrs. Perkins, [illegible] American Association for American Speech, [illegible]

[illegible]

"Stephen Collins Foster, composer of 'Oh! Susanna,' was a master of the dialect idiom in verse, and his lyrics conceal a lot of art that does not appear on the surface.

"It is much more difficult to write dialect than many amateurs think. Apart from that, however, I believe the verses for a Landon Campaign Song should be as modern and up-to-date as any current popular composition.

"The Presidential campaign has many live issues and these can be reflected with a wealth of vivid language.

"I don't believe in putting shackles on American speech. It's a vibrant, living growth constantly taking on new forms and it can be made a very flexible thing and still conform to authentic origins.

"As a judge I should prefer a Landon song in contemporary language that would appeal to the great mass of people rather than one in stilted dialect."

Why, for instance, that a Harvard lad who doesn't know the answers may get a better mark than the lad who does? Ann Marsters' Primer discloses.

What about the stage lady who went swimming in a hotel tank? Ann Marsters' Primer gives advice.

The Ski Club is jolly

If you happen to see a number of boys in strange outfits gamboling in the Harvard Yard and shouting "Kick me. I'm a fool," don't be alarmed. It's only initiations of the Hasty Pudding Club.

You can't, of course, join any social club in your Freshman year. But there are a number of non-social clubs which might interest you.

The Radio Club is more fun. It has built its own sending set in one of the laboratories where you may send messages anywhere in the country. Imagine being able to say "Hello mother," over the radio.

The Explorers Club is quite exciting. You plan expeditions, and actually go on some of them.

If you become a member of the Flying Club, you may get inexpensive transportation to Smith and other distant girls' colleges.

The Ski Club is jolly. It has skiing parties all through the winter—and sometimes with girls from Wellesley, Radcliffe and Simmons.

You may shoot in the basement of Memorial Hall, if you join the Rifle Club.

* * *

WHEN IT COMES time for you to pick your tutor, and if you are a fresh-air fiend, you should get along very well with Bruce Hopper, who teaches Russian government. He keeps the windows open—no matter how cold it is. Hopper, by the way, is quite a card with the ladies.

If you become suddenly ill, better see an outside doctor. The doctors at the Hygiene Building take a long time to find out what's wrong.

Be sure to invite the Army and Navy boys in when they're around the Yard before the football games. It's the thing to do.

Don't leave your car out all night on any of the streets in or around Harvard. If they're inside the college, they'll be tagged by Apted's men. At the third offence, the fine may be $25. Outside the college the Cambridge police have the situation well in hand.

* * *

IF YOU'RE INTERESTED in Scotticism, or in anything else, for that matter, go to Memorial Hall and talk to its superintendent, Huey Livingstone. An interesting fellow with a quaint Scotch brogue.

Be nice to the "goodies" who take care of your rooms—and you should know how they came to be called "goodies." The term originated at Harvard in the early part of the 17th Century, when New England women were called "Good wives." At that time, a janitor died and left his wife in charge of one of the houses. She was known as the "Goodwife," which finally degenerated into "goodie."

You should learn the story about the famous actress who went swimming in the Adams House tank—and in the new gym, too.

* * *

NEVER MAKE A DATE with one of the waitresses in the Union. If she's seen with you—she'll lose her job.

Don't try to write a book in your exams

Never use a cigarette holder

If you can get a Harvard banner with a Harvard seal on it, do so. It'll be worth money in the future. Harvard has made it illegal to have the seal on anything but official documents. But the storekeepers might have one left over.

Now that you have studied the first ten of the Primer Lessons—we will tomorrow ask you to step right into Lesson No. 11. Wonder if it wouldn't be a very fine idea for all students to save these lessons for reference.

AMERICAN PLANS COOKING SCHOOL

[illegible]

I don't like the word 'routine,'" says Miss Ferguson. "It's suggestive of a treadmill, and a treadmill means drudgery.

With the host of modern servants at our command today, there is no reason for any homemaker to be weighed down with heavy [illegible] burdens.

It is wise economy to use these labor-saving developments, since we homemakers don't wear fashions from the year 1900. Why should our kitchens be a quarter of a century behind the times?"

Evers Tells Tale Of Bill Terry's Self-Martyrdom

New York, Oct. 6.

AFTER WE PRESS PARSONS HAD prepared this World Series for burial in the drafty archives where paper-bound mummies of defunct sporting events are interred, up it pops from the slab with a fresh, almost schoolgirl complexion. Here comes new Giant vitality in the person of a red, heavy duty pitcher named Fred Fitzsimmons, the same bloke who heaved Saturday's memorable 4-hit defeat, with Carl Hubbell ready for his third coming on Wednesday, should there be another Wednesday in this serial.

Austen Lake

But today's little dramatic gem concerns Bill Terry, as related in the press sanctum by Johnny Evers, that barnacled and angular-jawed old tosser who used to work for the Braves. Johnny told how, just before this series, the executive of the oil company for which Terry works winters as a highly paid promotion manager (Ed. Note—A capable cuss this Terry) insisted that Bill submit to a physical examination, lest his value to the firm be damaged.

* * *

BILL'S HEROIC GESTURE

BILL LEARNED, SAID JOHNNY, that further play would lead to permanent impairment and the probability of life on a cane. The knee tendons were shrinking and the joints "freezing." And the oil executive warned Bill, ominously, that a promotion manager hobbling around on a cane was just no promotion manager at all, and that, inasmuch as his value to the firm was already equal to his baseball income, he would have to study the problem carefully.

Terry's answer was, according to Evers, "If I spend the rest of my life on my knees, I'll play through this World Series." This, seeming like flamboyance and a bit of that old theatrical braggadocio, was actually nothing of the sort, because Terry had nobody else to play first base. Sam Leslie, his regular at the spot, has a double hernia and faces a winter in the hospital. And the likely youngster, Jack McCarthy, who came up from Newark last month, is not eligible for play under World Series law.

* * *

JOINTS AND THE GIANT

TERRY MAY STILL FINISH this series on his knee, without waiting for winter, if it continues several more days. He is all but bedridden with his creaky joints, and in running out his plays yesterday, he looked like a man ascending a stepladder with a trunk on his back.

I learned from Willie Shaefer, the clubhouse masseur, that he has set up a complete therapeutic laboratory in Terry's hotel suite in the New Yorker where he spends the evenings baking his bones under ultra violet and infra red rays, steaming his legs with towels and rubbing in heating unguents until the skin is so tender that he packs the afflicted members with cotton pads before game time.

For an hour each morning Shaefer [illegible] Terry's legs like a bootblack flourishing a shoe rag, working out the stiffness until Bill can stand upright and then supporting him like a rheumatic cripple in little strolls around the floor, until gradually the muscles and tendons thaw.

"The treatment is about the same as a paralytic gets in a hospital," said Shaefer, who used to be a male nurse.

SURVIVAL OF THE UNFIT

THE SURPRISING THING is that the Giants, with two aged gentlemen with petrified props playing the extreme corners of the infield, have survived in this series as well as they have. Because Jackson, the only member of the club who saw service when the Giants and Yankees last met in World Series combat in 1923, has been coming apart at the hinges and has been the villain of this series. No pleasanter personality exists in the game than Travis, but he has made three vital errors in this series, capped by his wild overthrow yesterday in the sixth which led to a tie score.

[illegible] Terry proved the crux in the fatal tenth inning, when he came to bat with Moore on third and one out. Terry drove out the long sacrifice fly that decided the outcome and afterwards, in the clubhouse, Joe McCarthy's mood was very boyish. Instead of his usual amiable Santa Claus self, he was grumpy, inclined to surly silence, and locked up in his office. He came out finally and said: "When I get to the point where I second-guess myself, I know the season is dragging on my nerves."

He thought he had blundered [illegible] ordering Terry passed [illegible] that Bill's antique pins made him a perfect [illegible]. "That game wasn't in the stars," grumbled Joe. "If anybody had told me that DiMaggio, Gehrig and Lazzeri would come up and flop with the bases full, I'd taken him for a [illegible]."

Fact is that it was as much Hal Schumacher's pitching success as Lazzeri's and Dickey's failure, because Hal, who [illegible] a strange mixture of brilliance and blunder, struck out the first two and forced the last to lift a fly to the outfield.

BUCCS, Shamrocks TANGLE

AT BEEHIVE TOMORROW

By MURRAY KRAMER

Night football will again be offered Boston fans tomorrow evening when the Shamrocks battle the Pittsburgh Americans for the league leadership.

The Shamrocks now stand on top of the league with two victories and no defeats although they are tied with Pittsburgh, which won the one game played.

A victory over the Smokey City eleven would put the clover leafed [illegible] in a very nice spot as far as standings go and Coach [illegible] feels that his boys can do it.

The Shamrocks have a smart aggregation and play heads up football as was proved last Wednesday night when they defeated the New York Yankees. They capitalized on a Yankee fumble to score and then held on to their seven point lead.

Keep Lead

In the last half with a wet ball and rain they were content to retain their lead and resorted to straightaway football but they did show in the first half that they have offense and plenty of it.

As a real threat, the Shamrocks have a lateral attack that they execute as well as any group that has ever used the wide open method. Don Elser, in particular seems to have the knack of getting the ball away just as he is going down and has been able to gain much yardage for the locals this way.

Toledo Trip for 30 Terriers

Tomorrow evening after practice Coach Pat Hanley will name the [illegible] boys who are going to make the trip to Toledo, Ohio, for the Terriers clash with the University of Toledo next Saturday.

At present the Terriers number about 45 men and fifteen of these boys will be disappointed. Several of them are border line cases and it is going to be hard to choose.

It seems as though Lou Blaszynski, first string back last year, and Eddie [illegible], another brilliant halfback, will definitely be left at home as both are suffering from knee injuries and would be unable to play if they make the trip.

Injured Football Player Improved

Dr. Denning treated the injured player at the field and then sent him home. An X-ray was taken today and the lad is recovering nicely.

FIELD HELPS YANKS

Leaders Hooted at Polo Grounds

By FRED C. LANE

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 6—The Yankee burial squad has picked an overcast day to bury the dead. But the morticians must first contend with the curves and knuckle ball of fat Freddy Fitzsimmons.

The lad asked for just one more chance at the Gehrig Bunglers who refused victory on three occasions yesterday. He lost the toughest game at the Stadium but today is pitching on his home lot.

The batting averages of the slugging Yanks would take a decided drop were they playing regular at Braves Field where the spaces are wide and the grass green.

The Giants have everything to win in this series and but $2000 to lose. They were never figured in the outcome but today the odds have changed.

A victory by Fitzsimmons today and old Carl Hubbell will get his third crack at the Ruppert troupe. Carl wasn't right for that second encounter. He didn't have his stuff. In addition, the laws of average were against him.

Mel Ott is due. The midget Giant right fielder has been cold since the first game. This spot is where he puts grey-hairs on opposing pitchers. He can save the Giants' bacon should he come out of the coma.

Joe Cronin, Red Sox boss was plenty critical of Lou Gehrig's play. On one occasion, Joe pointed out, the iron man was playing in back of the runner on first with a sacrifice in the making.

Powell Hits Homer in 2nd, Ott Pounds One in 5th

By AUSTEN LAKE

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 6—The World Series was back just where it started last Wednesday, with overcast skies, clouds heavy with unshed rain. Since yesterday the Giants and Yankees have been working without pay, the profits going into the coffers of their league and club bosses.

They stood around during batting practice instead of showing the fire, dash and enthusiasm which had marked the approach to the earlier game.

A really funny feature of the time before game time was the gyrations and counter-marching that Al Schacht gave the military band. He had them walking in circles while tooting away until they looked dizzy—a harder workout than any college band during football intermission.

Big, bulky Fred Fitzsimmons was oiling his arm muscles in the pitching pits and Lefty "Goofy" Gomez was doing the same on the other side, a contrast in physical shapes—thin and fat man.

Prepare for Rain

It would be less amusing if it rained today because the people had trustingly appeared without overcoats in the sultry weather, and would get doubly drenched. Col. Ruppert's big baseball tomb showed over the center field pavilion, where the bargain customers were thick as pickles in a brine barrel. Press tempers and typewriter ribbons were wearing thin, and the 200 odd scriveners who were still hanging on gazed owlishly over the hazy scene.

Overhead, flying low in the limited ceiling, two commercial planes trailed messages to the people, one reading, "Next year's styles now etc." and the other saying that clear heads always called for a certain type of whiskey, implying the more one absorbs the clearer the head.

The crowd coming late as good New Yorkers do, was silent. There has been less of that hysterical hullabaloo in these games than any series one can recall. After all what can New York lose?

Fitzsimmons has one of those queer duck wing motions when pitching. As he warmed up he did it with a stilted half swing that released the ball around his belt buckle. He was working briskly in the pits throwing about once every seven seconds by my Gruen Curvex compared with Gomez's once every fifteen seconds.

Leiber Plays

The grandstand on either side of the big horseshoe showed moth eaten patches of vacancy, weather and the draggy tempo of the series discouraging workaday folk from taking any more.

Babe Ruth, wearing his cinnamon colored cap was down in his front box, instead of in the press box tapping out his living, breathing articles which appear each morning in the breakfast table press. The old literati was puffing a big black cigar, while a couple of stoop-shouldered stooges hammered out his essays in the press coop for his later signature.

But then there are as many "ghosts" in the press gallery as there are actual authors, typing their own stuff.

There were fuzzy, rain fringes along the horizon, rain that probably would be delivered here later. A ground crew curried the infield dirt hopefully dragging their big mats and finishing just as the band started the anthem. The umpires and managers at the plate stopped their rules conference bowing their scalps with hats over their hearts and facing flag pole.

They could have faced almost any direction and been patriotically correct, because the roof was rimmed with the Stars and Stripes. The game was on the dot.

Ott Gambles

Fitzsimmons, who for the sake of brevity will be called Fitz henceforth in this account, retired the Yankees in routine in the opening inning.

But Lefty Gomez was up to his chin in trouble from the very moment that Moore faced him and teed off for a left field single. In fact he had the bases full in about two minutes with nobody out. He walked Bartell. Terry laid down a sacrifice bunt and Leiber walked. About the most-shocking predicament that a pitcher can be in for the opening moment of a World Series.

Powell Homers

Then up stepped Jake Powell and drove a ball that traveled almost on a line into the upper tier of the left field stands, a whack that was still rising as it splashed among the customers. And there in a jiffy were your two runs back again, with the far less fuss and feathers than the Giants opening pair. Lazzeri added a single before Gomez fanned with his soap stock awkwardness, bringing the total of [illegible] Fitz [illegible].

It was lighter overhead now and the threat of rain had momentarily disappeared.

The Yankees scored another in the third after Crosetti had fanned. Red Rolfe [illegible] hit a single to left field [illegible] an impudent dance around first base which nearly got himself caught off on pegs from Mancuso and Fitz. In fact Fitz's quick toss [illegible] seemed to have him off the bag, and the crowd gave a disgruntled growl as umpire Magerkurth, the big bad wolf of this series, flattened his palms and swept them over the ground.

But Red was on third a moment later, when DiMaggio singled into deep left and he went around to beat the throw. From there Gehrig delivered him on a long fly to Ott, Red jogging home while Ott contented himself with holding DiMaggio on first. It gave the Yanks their first lead since Saturday.

The score stood Yankees 3, Giants 2.

The only excitement of the Giants half of this inning came when, with Leiber and Ott out, Rolfe made a silly looking error on a nice bouncing grounder by Mancuso. Your aunt Tillie could have caught that one in her bonnet, but it hopped out of Red's mitt and trickled off to the side where Crosetti made a frantic attempt to retrieve and throw [illegible].

It was just an oddity of [illegible], rather than anything significant. A silver blimp shaped like a fat cigar floated over the grounds blinking lights from its stomach for the information of the crowd that food could be bought at [illegible].

Gomez Hits

[illegible] Powell and Lazzeri having singled before him with one gone so that Lefty added the finishing touch, scoring Powell from second with a really solid sock—his second hit in this series. Terry called time to go over and feel Fitz' arm and inquire as to his feelings.

They stood around out there chatting and deliberating, but Bill [illegible] a few moments later when Red [illegible] Fitz out of there until Rolfe whacked his second hit in successive innings, a single which scored Lazzeri and broke Fitzie's heart.

This time Terry [illegible]. He just waved Fitz away like he was brushing away flies and beckoned to Clyde "Honest" Castleman to come in from the bullpen. Castleman is another of those [illegible] like [illegible] of the Yankees.

[illegible] the Giants half without a score, [illegible] Castleman to the wondermen [illegible] bounced a single through the infield and Bartell bunted safely when Rolfe was slow coming in for the ball and heaved it to Gehrig. But they died in their boots when Terry rolled out to Lazzeri to close the inning. Bill's grumbling gambs made him an easy mark for infield plays and he just stivvered down the line.

Ott hit a home run into the left field balcony in the Giants fifth after Gomez had pitched his first strike out of the game on Leiber. The perky little outfielder just lifted his foot in that characteristic wind up and patted the ball in a high arc that floated gently into the laps of the front row fans.

A man in a gray hat captured the souvenir after it bounced among the people and everybody within hand reach made grabs.

It was the tenth homerun in the series and the third for the Giants.

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Floyd says, everybody has had at least one adventure. Fred A. Carlson, [illegible] Deaconess road, Boston, won one hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. For further details, see the box at the right side of the page.

West End Boy Makes the Grade

Jack Robbins, the best-known host along the West Coast strip if you happen to hail from Boston, is not doing too badly in the song publishing business. He has just bought England's top song, "Sweetheart, Let's Grow Old Together," which incidentally was written by a couple of Americans. "When Did You Leave Heaven," which Mimi Rollins sang so effectively last night that she couldn't hear for encores at the Mayfair, is also a Robbins song. It's the No. 1 song this week in New York and Boston. Jack used to sell Boston Americans with Young Happy near the Hendricks Club. Young Happy remembers Jack. "That's the guy who used to keep singing 'Let Me Call You Dear Ol' Gang o' Mine'," Young Happy recollects.

LEWIS HANEY ON BUSINESS

CAR LOADINGS HELP
Business Outlook

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Oct. 6—Last week, with better weather, there was a pick-up in trade, which shows where the main reason for the recent slackness has lain. Furthermore, railway carloadings have made good gains.

The moves are changes which improve the business picture in important respects. Forward buying, or advance ordering, has been increasing, and commercial bank loans likewise.

Of course, industrial production is large. Under these circumstances, the backwardness in trade and shipments raised a question as to the balance between production and consumption.

Incidentally, it should be noted that bank loans are so far below demand deposits that a large increase in the loans need not result in any credit strain.

Steel production continues to expand. Perhaps the increase is not as much as seasonal, but if so, the fact would appear to be the result of limited productive capacity, not lack of demand.

In this connection, we find the coal industry making significant gains in activity, and coke demand exceeding the capacity of existing plants.

The automobile industry has now passed the period of Ford's seasonal shutdown, and is on the way up toward the peak of the new season that will come next spring.

Building activity has not been doing so much, but it has held percentage gains over last year, and is more largely based on private enterprise.

Current reports indicate that, after slumping in August and early September, machine tool orders have begun to gain again.

Perhaps best of all, railway carloadings have increased more than seasonally, to the highest level since 1930. Wholesale trade has shown greater activity, partly in anticipation of an excellent holiday season ahead.

Commodity prices snapped back a little last week, and it looks as if the general trend will again be upward for a while. (The debasement of the French franc will probably add to the forces of inflation). Tin, rubber, silk, wool tops, and cotton were among the gainers.

Last week, politics entered the final showdown stage. It is rather probable that business will be little affected, however, as the chances are that even if Roosevelt were re-elected, his power would be curtailed.

Anyhow, Al Smith's forthright repudiation of Roosevelt, and acceptance of Landon, is an appreciable factor in adding to the latter's strength. (Meanwhile, Roosevelt's defensive tactics concerning Communism and financial waste may advertise his weakness.)

It hardly seems possible that the happenings in France and Spain can help but remind many Americans of the possibilities which lie ahead in the way taken by the New Dealers. Already we find Communistic labor organizations threatening to tie up shipping on the Pacific Coast.

Worst of all, we find the Roosevelt Works Progress Administration army organizing to demand higher pay and threatening "sit-down strikes."

I call the last development worst of all, because it shows how the Roosevelt-Farley machine is building up a group of controlled voters which can save its face by taking its doles in the form of wages. Probably nothing that the New Deal has done is so demoralizing as its "work relief" policy.

The vote buying aspect is bad enough. The encouragement of the Communistic something-for-nothing spirit and the growth of a federal bureaucracy—these are fatal.

With Roosevelt in power, that drive will go on.

EXPORTS Of U.S. GAIN

CHAMBER REPORTS

Washington, Oct. 6 (AP)—Finding "sustained improvement in this country's export trade," the foreign commerce department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States today cited larger volume of sales abroad in many fields.

Reviewing figures for the first half of the year, the chamber said in a statement that:

"Three-fourths of our leading exports—51 out of 68 items—exceeded both the 1935 quantities and 1931-1935 averages, the latter including both good and bad years.

"Of the remaining 17 items, 7 exports exceeded the 1935 figure, but were below the 5-year average; 3 were below 1935, though larger than the 5-year average, and 7 declined below both the 1935 and the 5-year average quantities."

* * *

Most of the gains the Chamber said, "were in exports of manufactured products, notably American specialties."

Among the exports which increased over 1935 and the five-year average were motor vehicles and various kinds of machinery.

EASTERN SS. Income Higher

For eight months to August 31 net income was $806,610, against $501,581 in the corresponding eight months a year ago.

Wall St. Hears

New York, Oct. 6 (INS)—That full year sales of McCrory Stores (MRY) are expected to approximate $39,000,000.

That Phillips Petroleum (O) will pay another extra dividend by Christmas.

That the current upward trend of excess bank reserves is likely to reach its peak shortly.

CHEAP Electric POWER

EXAGGERATED BY POLITICIANS

MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1936, Universal Service)

Los Angeles, Oct. 6—My private talks with power executives on the Pacific coast and elsewhere create the impression that the importance of cheap electric power in the development of regions of the country has been exaggerated by politicans.

This observation is timely in connection with the forthcoming transmission within a few weeks of the first power to this city from the colossal Boulder Dam project.

Unquestionably, the huge availability of new power resources will constitute a spur to industrial development out here, as those who have contracted to market the power will be forced to seek new customers. In a sense, this may be true also of the great water development, which likewise discounts the future growth of this section.

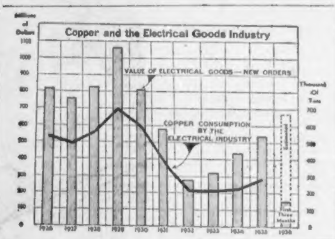
The point is that cheap power of and by itself is not usually a determinant in the location of plants. In the overall, average industrial budget, power constitutes perhaps two per cent of the total dollar outlay of an enterprise.

Accordingly, other factors besides the cheapness and abundance of power are considered in fixing the geography of plant locations, such factors as availability and cost of labor, the tax situation, freight rates and the whole complex of accessibility to markets.

Incidentally, a beneficent spiral is tending to build up the economy of the great southwestern empire. As the population expands, demand for merchandise reaches a quantity basis which warrants national concerns in setting up factories and assembly plants here. Accordingly, the trend is toward greater economic self sufficiency, and there is less dependence on transmountain sources of supply in the East.

In respect to the cost of power, this item bulks large only for a few special types of industries. In aluminum, the cost of power may run up to 18 per cent of the total, and in the matter of making certain metal alloys, it runs up beyond 30 per cent. But these are exceptional and are not typical of the general trend.

COPPER INDUSTRY



FORECAST

Revival in Next Few Years

The copper industry after four lean years is expecting a sharp revival to take place during the next few years.

These expectations are based upon the large rearmament programs of European countries and the feeling that this country is entering a period of rapid electrical expansion.

The hopes of the industry are pinned upon the recovery and expansion in construction, which means more telephones, power lines and equipment.

Then again, utility companies whose construction and equipment expenditures dwindled from $853,000,000 in 1929 to $192,855,000 in 1933, are expected to replace obsolete equipment and provide for greater expansion.

Orders for electrical copper products increased 45 per cent during the first half of this year, as compared with the corresponding period last year.

ORE SHIPMENTS Show Gain

Ore shipments from upper lake ports for the season to the end of September are 52.05 per cent over the like period of last year, according to the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association.

Shipments in September totaled 7,481,071 tons, 55.29 per cent over September, 1935, while total shipments to September 30 amounted to 33,762,588 tons, an increase of 11,558,375 tons over a year ago.

25 Years Ago

New York, Oct. 6 (INS)—Eight members of wall paper trust were indicted under criminal sections of anti-trust act.

U. S. Rubber put common on 4 per cent basis.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Oct. 6—Trade estimates of General Motors sales to dealers the last three months point to smaller per share earnings compared with the June quarter, but foreshadow a continued gain over the same 1935 period.

The company's report of September and nine months' shipments is due to be made public shortly. Although operations last month were reduced by preparations for new models, the increases over last year reported for July and August are expected to reflect in the combined operations for the full quarter. Third quarter net last year was equal to 66 cents a share for the common. June quarter, 1936, profit was $2 a share, and for the first half of the year it was $3.17 a share. Cash dividends paid on the common stock thus far in 1936 total $75,097,851 out of earnings applicable to the issue, amounting to $136,105,260. The record annual distribution to common stockholders was $160,300,132 in 1928, or $3.86 a share on the present outstanding number of shares. In view of Wall Street hopes that second half common dividends will at least equal the initial six months' distribution, indications are that the total 1936 cash disbursement on the common will approximate the peak 1928 sum.

* * *

Ore, Iron, Steel Freight Outlook

With final quarter freight loadings of ore and concentrates expected to top a year ago by 40.8 per cent, and a rise of 21.6 per cent in iron and steel freight movement forecast, bigger business is in store for the Eastern railroads. Rail experts expect the anticipated steel traffic gains to be shared by New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio and Chesapeake & Ohio-Nickel Plate systems. Some Western roads, notably the ore carriers serving the Chicago-Gary area, are slated for fourth quarter traffic gains as well as the result of the high rate of fall-winter activity expected in the steel industry. Steel operations at 76 per cent of capacity currently are the best since 1930, and shippers' forecasts support belief heavy steel operations will continue.

* * *

American Woolen Preferred Plan

Disappointing action of American Woolen preferred is easily explained by the fact that continued delay in drafting a satisfactory recapitalization plan adds new complications in solving the problem of liquidating arrears. The longer a proposal is postponed, the greater becomes the size of the unpaid dividends. One Wall Street commentator remarked in this connection the mounting total of accumulations will only make preferred stockholders more insistent in their demand for the fairest kind of treatment in view of the arrears to which they are entitled. Accumulations now amount to $59.25 a share. In only two years since 1931 has the company been able to earn the full $7 preferred dividend. It is currently paying $1 quarterly against accumulations.

* * *

Heavy Steel Trade Marches to Front

Striking progress of heavy steel companies, which had lagged in the recovery movement, together with a slackening in the progress of light steel companies, heretofore leaders in the revival procession, is noted in an analysis of trends in the industry by Poor's. In the first half of this year, output of heavy materials rose 44 per cent compared with a year ago against a 20 per cent rise for lighter steel forms. Earnings results for the two groups show an even greater contrast, according to the survey, with seven integrated companies reporting aggregate earnings of $34,395,000 for the initial half of 1936, up 572 per cent over the $5,119,000 for the 1935 period; an equal number of representative makers of light products reported earnings of $10,269,000, against $12,674,000, down 19 per cent.

FACTS On Recovery SHOWN

RETURN TO NORMALCY

By B. C. FORBES

Signs that this country, as always in the past, is overcoming depression and moving towards normalcy:

The "World Series" games—inexcusably mis-named — have attracted great crowds, at either a goodly or an exorbitant price per seat.

Instalment-buying is on the increase.

Women's "fashionable" shoes are booming.

The most luxurious hotels and restaurants are doing good business—the New York Waldorf-Astoria management tells me that over five hundred would-be patrons have had to be diverted to other hotels during recent weeks.

* * *

Air-conditioning is on the up-and-up.

Oil burners are being installed freely in both private and up-to-date apartments.

Commercial failures are fewer.

BOSTON EXCHANGE

Seeks to EXPAND Service

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The Boston Stock Exchange is planning to apply for unlisted trading privileges on a number of issues now traded in New York markets that have a large New England following.

Officials of the local board are said to be making comprehensive studies of certain stocks preparatory to seeking SEC permission for trading privileges.

Formal application will probably be made towards the end of the month. Considerable progress is already reported and State street circles are now confident the request will be granted. It is pointed out that exchange officials propose to have as complete a record as possible of the various issues in which they seek to trade in order that when application is made there will be sufficient data to warrant approval.

The car loading estimates of the shippers advisory boards just completed indicate that American railroads are going to enjoy an excellent fourth quarter. For the final period of the year these expert analysts representing 13 regional boards forecast a rise of 9.7 per cent in loadings of 29 principal commodities. Last year the final quarter saw 5,107,030 cars loaded and this year it is expected that 5,603,136 will be required. This is an average of 466,928 per week and remember it is only for 29 items. Good rail shares have much ahead of them in our opinion and should be purchased during reactionary periods.

Notebook: That contract carrier clinched for eight floors of the Gwynne Building in Cincinnati—home of Procter & Gamble's offices—makes good reading for bulls on the stock . . . Talk of keeping big board market open until four o'clock is interesting . . . The point being to give sections on time other than Eastern standard a chance to do some business . . . Sperry is about due to come to life . . . It has been trading in a very narrow range that suggests a good upswing . . . First to 23-25 then to 28-30 . . . Bendix is looking better and should shortly start to do better.

The rotating tactics we advised readers to watch for lost little time in putting in an appearance. This morning oils started to take their place with rails leaders right from the opening gong. We outlined a position in the group a few weeks ago when the whole market was still confined in its tight trading range and now say that those who took long positions should maintain them in anticipation of better levels. The oil group has impressed us as rather behind the general list and as a result is capable of even better things.

* * *

Potpourri: The condition of the market and its constant straining for higher prices can best be described as the outgrowth of repressed desire . . . After all the list spent practically the whole summer in alternate rallies and declines which resulted in no headway being made . . . And now that it is out in the open we might reasonably expect it will do the things it has long desired to do . . . Republic Steel has the news with it and is the favored steel on our list . . . Johns Manville should be able to come close to the 130 marker on this upward hitch.

MARKET Early Gains REDUCED

PROFIT TAKING APPEARS

New York, Oct. 6—The new recovery push of the stock market again ran into profit taking today after many issues had climbed fractions to 3 or more points to peak levels for the past 5 or 6 years.

The list bounded forward at the opening under leadership of the oils, steels, farm implements and specialties. For a while the ticker tape failed to keep pace with floor dealings. But selling later cropped up and near the fourth hour morning advances had been reduced in most instances.

Carrier loans were in demand in the bond division. Commodities moved indefinitely. The British pound backed water in terms of the dollar, while the revalued gold currencies were a bit better than even.

Spectacular share performers were J. I. Case and Deere, each getting up about 5 points. Ahead fractions to 2 points or so were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Rolling Mill, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Caterpillar Tractor, Consolidated Edison, International Paper & Power "A" and Preferred, Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, Seaboard Oil, Amerada, Houston Oil, Pure Oil, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, American Can, General Electric, Reliable Stores, Celanese and Canada Dry.

In a restricted area were Packard, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Schenley, National Distillers, American Telephone, Western Union, North American, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Northern Pacific, Anaconda, Kennecott and Loew's.

Timely Items

Merchandising shares came in for renewed study in the board rooms as retailers were reported revising upward their previous forecasts of October sales gains.

In some quarters it was believed department store distribution for the country as a whole this month will exceed the 1935 period by the largest margin for any month this year.

Recent buoyancy of some of the electrical equipment stocks was said to be due partly to indications business for major companies in this line in 1936 will be the best for any year since 1930.

Holders of communications issues noted an increase of 129,880 telephones for the Bell System in September compared with an upturn of 92,100 in the corresponding 1935 month.

At the beginning of foreign exchange transactions the French franc was up .00¾ of a cent at 4.67¾ cents, and sterling was off 12-16 of a cent at $4.91.

Sees Trade Ahead

Department of Commerce reports advent of October found retail trade throughout the United States well ahead of the same period last year. Larger orders for automobiles are seen as major factor in good showing of major industrial centers.

'ROYALISTS'

B. C. Forbes CONCLUDES Series

By B. C. FORBES

This is the last of these articles on "economic royalists" and "princes of privilege."

Or are they those who are able to live comfortably by doing a day's work and who are under no obligation to tax their brains after they quit?

I still believe that it is worth while to pay a goodly price for success, but I become more profoundly convinced with age that success can be at too great a price.

Through my mind at this instant flash man after man who achieved position and fortune but at too costly a sacrifice.

Some of them were such slaves to business that they died prematurely, victims of over-work. Some of them were so absorbed by their business that they wrecked their domestic happiness, alienating the affection of either wife or children, or both. Some of them ruined their health. A few so completely lost their mental balance that they committed suicide.

Others earned so much money that their children concluded it was entirely unnecessary for them to become industrious, useful productive citizens, and went to the dogs.

* * *

Many years ago I asked a number of highly successful and rich business men whether they regarded it as a blessing or curse for a young man to be bequeathed a million dollars. The reply of Judge Gary, then the omnipotent master of the United States Steel Corporation, remains vividly in my mind: "All depends on the character of the young man."

I still believe in the worthwhileness of striving to rise in the world, of striving to excel in one's walk of life, in striving to accumulate a competency, in seeking to provide amply for one's wife and reasonably for other dependents.

But I am not at all sure, looking back half-a-century, that the men who allow business, allow getting-on-in-the-world, allow achievement to oust everything else are to be regarded as "princes of privilege."

* * *

For example, I have one friend among the working-class who, I verily believe, leads a more tranquil, more genuinely happy life than the vast majority of ceaselessly preoccupied business, industrial, financial or other magnates. He has had a steady job for years. His pay has enabled him to acquire his own home, save enough to safeguard against penury in his or his wife's old age.

When his day's work ceases, his necessity for thinking about his responsibilities also ceases. He is under no obligation to lie awake o' nights wondering how to overcome difficulties, to wrestle with next day's obligations.

He knows that he is highly regarded by his employer. He feels confident that when his working days are over, his employer will treat him humanely. And every week he adds to his financial reserves.

When evening comes, he is happy, carefree. Because of his kindly nature, he has many friends. And he enjoys their friendship. He has earned the distinction of being a master in his own (humble) line of work. Other workmen seek his coaching and counsel. His intelligent, diligent, faithful services are appreciated by his employer.

What has made possible the comfortable position occupied by him and by many, many others?

Is it not the devotion, sacrifice, ceaseless industry of others who, starting humbly, have consecrated their lives, have dedicated themselves to outstanding achievement, to battling for conspicuous leadership, to building up employment-giving enterprises?

More employes, consequently, enjoy comfortable living conditions and live in America than anywhere else on the face of the earth.

But I am not so sure whether, on the whole, those who have subordinated everything else to reaching the summits have derived more from life than men like my friend.

Deport Alien Reds! Rescind The Recognition of Soviet Russia

THE fact that Communism—nurtured by Soviet Russia—is seeking to destroy the free institutions of America is not to be denied.

Neither is the shameful fact to be denied that COMMUNISTS are supporting Franklin D. Roosevelt for re-election in 1936 IN ORDER TO BUILD A REVOLUTIONARY "PEOPLES FRONT" IN 1940.

Mr. Roosevelt has said that he repudiates this support.

But what has he done to prove that he repudiates it?

1—By immediately deporting all alien Communists, as the law requires; and

Again a "Sucker"

The Raw Deal Gives $2,000,000,000 To Europe---You Get the Bill

THE NAME of the United States of America once more heads the international "sucker list."

It was placed there by the present Administration, which is obviously DETERMINED to force this country into foreign entanglements by the so-called stabilization agreement.

It is a "gentlemen's agreement," an agreement with those two "honorable gentlemen," France and England.

Into it we pour TWO BILLION DOLLARS of American money, YOUR money.

THE ADMINISTRATION TAKES THAT HONOR BUSINESS AT PAR EVEN THOUGH WE ARE ALREADY OVERLOADED WITH IT IN "PAYMENT" OF WAR DEBTS.

No one gave the Administration authority to pour that TWO BILLION DOLLARS into a bottomless hole. Congress didn't. Congress wasn't even consulted.

But, then, the present Congress has long since ceased to be a part of the American Government.

NOW then, how does this stabilization agreement work?

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has already given us an example of how it works, an INCREDIBLE example.

Soviet Russia sold $5,000,000 in British pounds.

America BOUGHT $5,000,000 in British pounds to keep the value of our gentleman friend's currency from slipping in the world market.

WHAT DO WE GET OUT OF IT?

Secretary Morgenthau will have to answer that—if he can.

Another example!

But what is to keep it there?

YOUR TWO BILLION DOLLARS WILL KEEP IT THERE.

Will keep it there, that is, until France and its poor relations recover from their financial troubles, absorb YOUR money and again tune up to call us "Uncle Shylock."

AS long ago as the national election of 1920 the AMERICAN PEOPLE REPUDIATED ONCE AND FOR ALL ANY SUGGESTION OF FOREIGN ALLIANCES; POLITICAL, MARTIAL AND FINANCIAL.

Washington seems to have forgotten that OVERWHELMING VOTE.

The time has come for another warning.

'Buy American,' Says Pacific

THE Pacific Mills, outstanding among the world's big textile corporations, with plants in Lawrence, Dover, N. H., and Columbia and Lyman, S. C., wants American markets preserved for American manufacturers.

To accomplish this, Alfred E. Colby, president and treasurer, has appealed to each of the company's thousands of employes to "BUY AMERICAN."

Says President Colby:

"If we desire to maintain our present wage levels and hope to improve them, the solution lies in the hands of EACH American.

"The solution is for EACH person to insist that the goods he buys are made by AMERICAN labor.

"The increase in volume of American business will reflect itself in more employment and better living conditions."

In view of the New Deal "reciprocal" trade treaties which have flooded American markets with the slave and coolie labor products of Japan, Russia and other foreign nations, the action of the Pacific Mills is as timely as it is good.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Oct. 6—Everyone in the writing and drawing field has thrown a figurative hat in the air over the most spectacular come-back in syndicate field history of Rube Goldberg. For 20 years Goldberg rode the top wave and became deservedly one of the richest of the pen and ink funny men.

O. O. McIntyre

Then, when a shade past 50, came the inevitable dip in popularity that comes to all limners and in almost every instance means professional oblivion. But Rube has beaten Fate's rap. He might easily have become a gentleman of leisure and spent the rest of his years enjoying life in the grand manner.

But he bided his time—and to appearances was taking the upset standing and with a smile. Behind the scenes he was a bit unhappy and spending most of his hours clutching for the Big Idea that would put him back in the running. And after two years—Eureka!—he found it.

Scotch golfer—My lad, are you my caddie?

Yessir.

Very good.

He is one of those queer, shabby Gascons found pick-thanking in the arty bistros around Washington square. As he sat uninvited at the table, he kept tasting white pellets. At least four in a half hour. Curious, I ventured: "Peppermint?" He replied: "No, aspirin. I nibble them all day."

One of the forlorn two-by-twice cafes niched in the West 52nd street jostle hit upon this dido for a boost over a dull period. It rigged up camera lights and movie picture paraphernalia at the entrance to create impression it was on the brink of a celebrity stampede. And as a result that assorted crashing crowd known inelegantly as "lens lice" flocked to the empty tables in hope of achieving a pinch of space in the society pages and a caricature in Mark Hellinger's Sunday spread. New York!

No theatrical first nighters have been so constant in attendance and cash patronage the past few years as a plump middle-aged couple known to the critics as Mr. and Mrs. Ira Katzenberg. They are in the kill of every flop, no matter how obscure, and at the birth of every hit, no matter how opulent. They invariably occupy front pew aisle seats.

Despite unfailing attendance, I have never during my years of watching seen them bow to any other regular. If they like or dislike the performance they do not show it.

Tallulah Bankhead's opening nights bring out in full ermined crush that showy brigade of first nighters who come not to see the play but to be seen themselves. The hand-wavers who yoo-hoo across the room: "See you at Southampton tomorrow!" They are the mayhem inspirers who have to receive a half dozen lobby calls to take their seats so the show can go on. And even then they trickle in all during the first act.

To my notion, the greatest progress and brilliance in newspaper writing in the past few years have been accomplished by the new crop of sports writers. I refer to Bill Corum, Joe Williams, Quentin Reynolds, and several others whose names elude me at the moment.

I have a zero interest in sports, football, baseball, tennis, hockey, boxing, etc., yet I read the sprightly commentators for their flushed earnestness and forthright fusion of fact and fancy.

A prim secretary I know with the same lack of interest does the same thing. Also an 80-year-old aunt. To write and interest the outsiders as they do is a tribute to their skill.

After an absent-minded bit of jay walking near Radio City I started to return, with a hop on it, a traffic cop's bawl-out. But when he came menacingly toward me with a "What's that?" I completely wilted into a Casper Milquetoast pip-squeak.

I felt much like that figure in a Bozeman Bulger story of the colored umpire, small of stature, but loud of voice, at a Negro's ball game. He called "Strike one!" A moment later he waved his arm and bellowed. "Strike two!" The big buck batter scowled and shouted: "Two what?"

Piped the umpire meekly, "Too high!"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

How much some people get out of life—how little, others. Doesn't seem to depend on wealth or position, either. Nor even on travel or adventure. Give some people every material advantage . . . send them to the far places of the world, exotic, mysterious . . . let them taste every amusement . . . still they'll come home and talk about their lumbago. Or where they found the best roast beef.

Elsie Robinson

You've met them, haven't you? Been bored to tears. Yet, at the same time, you've known some gnarled, illiterate laborer, some shabby clerk or mousey little housewife, whose conversation was rich with color, salty with wit.

Life, for them, was a Great Show, always new and exciting. They could see more on their daily plod to office or market than the millionaire in his private yacht. Lucky creatures—what, you've wondered, is their secret.

Life IS a great show — the greatest ever staged — a show packed with humor and drama, beauty and glory, terror and delight. And if you're willing to look for it, you can find that drama, everywhere.

IF YOU'RE WILLING TO LOOK FOR IT.

But are you? Are you willing to see and enjoy life in its amazing variety . . . or do you never see beyond your own monotonous nose?

I'm thinking of a verse E. B. W., famed New York ribnudger, once flipped. And never did his clever scalpel slip more neatly under our stupid, human hide.

"The critic leaves at curtain fall
"To find in starting to review it
"He scarcely saw the play at all
"For watching his reaction to it."

We all go through life seeking—WHAT? We all SAY we're seeking life—BUT ARE WE? Or are we simply seeking some reflection of OURSELVES?

TIME YOURSELF

Study people—study yourself—with that thought in mind. You'll be surprised! There's the famous Mr. Jones. Every object he sees, every experience he has, serves but one purpose for Mr. Jones . . . IT REMINDS HIM OF SOMETHING MR. JONES HAS OR HAS DONE. If Mr. Jones lives to be ninety, and visits every country on earth, he will still have seen but one thing and that is—Mr. Jones.

And there's Miss White, the filing clerk. Miss White is constantly bewailing her poverty—wishing she were rich enough to go places and do things. But if she were as rich as Croesus, Miss White would do one thing, and that is—think and talk about Exhibit A . . . her delicate digestion, her sensitive feelings, her loneliness and the dirty deal she's had from the whole human race.

"He scarcely saw the play at all.

"For watching his reaction to it."

You long for life . . . long to tingle and burn to life's beauty, adventure, solemn grandeur, gypsy charm. Jealously you watch those who can and do. Then, why don't you? Watch yourself and you'll find the answer. Time yourself.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Herbert Hoover's "non-political" tax talk to the American Mining Congress was one of the best and sanest political speeches the people of this country have heard in a long time. He explained that any form of public expression, except crooning, can be distorted into politics in these days. But it required no distortion to get the political flavor of his remarks. What he said constituted a political speech because the tax lunacy of the New Deal has made taxation one of the paramount issues of the present campaign.

Taxation is the concern of every voter in this country, because, in one way or another, every voter is a taxpayer. And even the taxes which do not strike you directly affect you. Take the tax levied at the insistence of President Roosevelt to compel corporations to distribute all their profits in dividends and to stop them from building up surpluses. That is poison to millions of workers and potential workers, because it discourages the creation of employment.

"Anyone familiar with the growth of the West knows the mining industry has created and expanded from plowing in its own profits," former President Hoover said. "Nor can it be done in any other way. But the new law steps in and says that if you use your profits to build up this business you must pay the government up to over 40 per cent on those profits. THAT IS a TAX OF UP TO OVER 40 PER CENT UPON IMPROVEMENTS WHICH GIVE MEN JOBS.

"If the government is going to take up to 40 per cent of the temporary profits from each ultimate failure as well as the successes, the miner doesn't stand a dog's chance."

Creation of employment so jobless men could be put to work at useful tasks and could be made self-supporting again has been the most important goal of the Roosevelt Administration but the New Dealers, more intent upon Russianizing the United States than upon promoting employment, have devoted most of their effort to DISCOURAGING employment.

They cut down farm production, throwing additional millions of workers upon relief. Through their NRA meddling they cut down business and industrial employment.

And now, they are using taxation to discourage and prevent the business and industrial expansion which would create more jobs. After all the spending and squandering and pipe priming of the last three years, we have just about as many unemployed as when the New Deal started.

Another vital issue with which Hoover dealt was the tax exemption for Federal, State and municipal boards which he described as "a wholesale sanctuary from taxation for large incomes." President Roosevelt has advocated the removal of this exemption.

But he never will do anything to remove it as long as his administration is borrowing billions to meet its deficits. For as soon as public bonds are made taxable, the interest rate on them has to go up.

All through the New Deal, the Federal Government has been borrowing because it was spending each year billions of dollars more than it was taking in through taxes. EVERY DOLLAR IT BORROWED EXEMPTED A DOLLAR FROM NATIONAL, STATE, MUNICIPAL AND SCHOOL TAXATION. In other words, EVERY BOND ISSUE IT PUT OUT REDUCED THE AMOUNT OF TAXABLE WEALTH BY JUST THAT MUCH.

Only an insane man will deliberately starve himself to death. Only an insane government will deliberately dry up its only sources of income. Governments feed only on taxes. As they increase tax exemptions, they cut down their supply of financial food unless these exemptions stimulate the creation of more wealth which can be taxed.

The exemption of public bonds from taxation does not stimulate anything except tax dodging and governmental squandering. But it does make more burdensome the tax loads of those who are least able to pay.

Do Spirits Come Back?

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Is there such a thing as a ghost? Hamlin Garland, our celebrated man of letters, says there is not. His is no rash opinion. Neither is it off-hand judgment. It is the opinion of one who has been engaged studiously and for a long time in a search for the supernatural.

Edwin C. Hill

He is unable to agree with the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle or the scientist, Sir Oliver Lodge, on spiritualism. In a new book, "Forty Years of Psychic Research," Mr. Garland gives this as his conclusion:

"While it would not be quite true to say that as an investigator I am at the point from which I started forty-five years ago, I shall no doubt disappoint some of my readers when I confess a state of doubt.

"I can only put into this final chapter some of my convictions along with a candid statement of the intellectual barriers which have thus far prevented me from an acceptance of the spirit hypothesis.

"I do this in a mood of sincere regret. I wish I could end this book with a triumphant song of victory, but I cannot do so. I find myself most in harmony with those who say: 'All these movements, voices, forms are bio-dynamic in character. They are born of certain unknown powers of the human organism. They are thought forms—resultants of mind-controlling matter. They all originate in the seance room and have not been proved beyond it.'"

Much more skeptical of the spirit hypothesis than students of psychic research are the professional magicians.

HOUDINI'S OFFER

They will not be convinced that all the happenings in the seance room are not man-made trickery. The late Harry Houdini had a standing offer that he could produce any manifestation of a medium. Howard Thurston was more of a believer in the possibility of a spirit coming back. Houdini told his wife that he would try to deliver a message in code from the beyond and, among other signs, his spirit would try to open a pair of locked handcuffs.

David P. Abbott, who had the reputation of being the world's greatest magician, was uncertain whether the dead could communicate with the living. Abbott promised his wife:

"If there is any way I can come back after I die, I shall. Perhaps we should arrange some signal, known only to ourselves, so we can be sure I am talking and there is no trickery."

DOYLE BELIEVED

No signal was pre-arranged, but at last reports the widow had received no communication.

Joseph Dunninger, the magician, is an out-and-out skeptic on the question of ghosts. He has come out with an offer of ten thousand dollars to anyone who can show him a real haunted house within reasonable distance of New York and which he can investigate during his leisure time. This is Dunninger's challenge:

"As chairman of the Universal Council for Psychic Research, I will pay the sum of ten thousand dollars to any one or any group of persons offering a house which they believe to be genuinely haunted and which I cannot prove to be either a hoax, a myth or some natural or scientific manifestation which, being misunderstood, is being accepted as the work of some supernatural force.

"Much has been published of late in newspapers, magazines and other periodicals concerning a haunted house, supposedly occupied by spirits, and some individuals have gone so far as preparing spirit broadcasts and hook-ups, not alone in local territory, but from here to England. These were supposed to record the moans and groans of departed spirits."

On the other hand, Conan Doyle was convinced that he had communicated with his son, who had perished in the war.

There is no reasonable doubt that forces exist about us over which we have no control, and which we find it impossible to explain. The question is, are they the workings of nature of which we still are ignorant; is there a realm of the supernatural.

And every man answers according to his own mind.

U. S. Red Play "Angel"?

By Harold Lord Varney

IF any further incident were needed to demonstrate the utter futility of Miss Flanagan's Federal Theater Project, the production of Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here" should supply the final clincher.

A novel so highly controversial and in such scabrous bad taste that it suffered rejection for screen production by all the important motion picture companies, "It Can't Happen Here" is now to be given a nation-wide staging UNDER THE GONFALON OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT ITSELF.

Worst, so eager was the Federal Theater Project to secure the production rights to this particular book, that it has contracted to pay Mr. Lewis and his co-author a weekly royalty of $1400 OUT OF GOVERNMENT RELIEF MONEY.

For there can be no disputing the fact that "It Can't Happen Here" is PROPAGANDA—naked and unconcealed. OSTENSIBLY, it is a clarion warning against American "Fascism."

ACTUALLY, it is a venomed libel upon the D. A. R., the American Legion, Rotary International, and all of the other non-radical movements which are on the blacklist of American Communism.

* * *

To disarm the reader, the story is told through the voice of one DOREMUS JESSUP, who is not a Communist but a "Liberal." But JESSUP'S "Liberalism" quickly reveals itself to be a Pink and sickly thing. Mr. Lewis has seen fit to draw him—perhaps autobiographically—as one of those Fabian "Liberals" of the American Civil Liberties Union type who constantly grow apoplectic over "Fascist" menaces, but WHO NEVER SEEM ABLE TO DETECT EITHER HARM OR DANGER IN COMMUNISM.

Now there can be no question that Mr. Lewis, as a private citizen, has the right to expound this curious point of view, as he does, through his ordinary literary outlets.

BUT WHY GIVE IT THE APPROVING STAMP OF OUR FEDERAL GOVERNMENT?

Since when has Uncle Sam become the financial angel for the delirious propaganda of the American Civil Liberties Union and the American League Against War and Fascism?

* * *

It has lavished its efforts (and tax payers' money) upon such productions as "Triple-A Ploughed Under" with its speech by Earl Browder and its vicious attack upon the Supreme Court; upon "The Class of '29" with its wearisome dialogues upon Socialism and Communism and its "Red Marching Song"; upon the Red play, "Path of Flowers," by the Soviet dramatist, Katayev; upon "Injuction Granted" with its propaganda for the C. I. O.; and upon "Dance of Death," whose climax depicts the approaching shadow of Karl Marx.

* * *

PERHAPS the most tell-tale commentary upon Miss Flanagan's regime has been the fact that it has won the fulsome plaudits of the Communists themselves.

In the September 15th issue of the "NEW MASSES," Communism has expressed its reaction to the Flanagan policies in the declaration that:

"The Federal theater, to date, has had a magnificent record of achievement."

It reveals, more accurately than any explanation which we could offer, the impulsion behind Miss Flanagan's present zeal over "It Can't Happen Here."
